

The Mysterious Meiji Laundry

Often used in news articles to depict Japantown in Alameda, CA, there is virtually no record its existence, other than this low quality photograph.

It never appears in Polk address directories, advertisements or new stories from the late 1890s to the 1920s. Perhaps it went out of business shortly after it opened. It was located at 1618 Park St, the heart of Alameda's Nihonmachi. By November 1922, the address was the Imagire Sewing School.

Often used in news articles to depict Japantown in Alameda, CA, there is virtually no record of the existence of Meiji Laundry, other than this low quality photograph.

It never appears in Polk address directories, advertisements or new stories from the late 1890s to the 1920s. Perhaps it went out of business shortly after it opened. It was located at 1618 Park St, the heart of Alameda's Nihonmachi. By November 1922, the address was the Imagire Sewing School. photo circa early 1900s-1910s.