

"Nellie"

Stick your tongue in this hole

Fumiko "Nellie" Itahara poses on the roof her parent's 1621 Park Street apartment in downtown Alameda, CA, circa 1928-1929.

"Taken on the roof where she and a dad were married," wrote daughter Judy Furuichi. "Across the street from the temple, corner of Park St and Pacific.... Where they lived when they were evacuated. Dad's "long gun" is still in the walls there.....didn't want to be caught with it!" (he buried inside a wall in this building, when WWII started and it may still be there.)

"Nell"

Stick your tongue in
it is a hole

" Taken on the roof where she and a dad were married," wrote daughter Judy Furuichi. "Across the street from the temple, corner of Park St and Pacific.... Where they lived when they were evacuated. Dad's "long gun" is still in the walls there.....didn't want to be caught with it!" (he buried inside a wall in this building, when WWII started and it may still be there.) circa 1933