

Personal Correspondence

1998.38.54

Kazuyoshi Nagashima
Per I. History

Dear Mr. Wells

Last night I studied very hard to finish on my notes on the earliest civilization. I worked until 12 o'clock and this morning from 6 o'clock. As I worked on my notes I thought I was playing until today. I felt shame. I haven't finish on the civilization of Egypt yet. I know that I will get a low grade, but I am trying my best and I am going to work more from now on. This morning when you said, "We will have test," and we did. My mind was trying to get the answer, but I couldn't until you told me. I was shame for just a simple question that I couldn't answer. I can't blame the boy who said some thing. I am shame on my self. I am shame of my test. Please put big F on my test so that I will have that F deep in my heart that after the semester is over, I will see if I will get B. Which I am going to work from now on. Please excuse me for fulling around in the class until today.

Yours truly,

Kazuyoshi Nagashima