New Ruling on Issuance of Movie Tickets Announced

Farm Opportunities in Midwest Area Favorable

Encouragement is given evacuee farmers who wish to relocate in the Midwestern area by Elmer L. Shirrell, Chicago relocation supervisor. In a letter addressed to the project director, he urged the farmers to come out and investigate the possibilities. He pointed out that that part of the country is not familiar with the Japanese, and in turn the evacuees are not acquainted with the land of that area.

Shirrell recommended that farmers be urged to take jobs that will give them an opportunity to pay their living expenses, recognizing they may be accepting less than they may have received prior to evacuation. But taking such jobs does enable them to study the climate, soil and markets, so by the beginning of the 1944 crop season, they may have enough knowledge of this area to lease or buy a farm and operate it themselves, he said. The cities of the Midwest have good markets for vegetables, according to Shirrell.
