

FORT MISSOULA, MONTANA

The Bitterroot River flowed through the Reservation. The internees were permitted, with an escort, to go there for recreation. They built the above boats and improved part of the grounds so that later it could be used for picnics. Since it was "outside the fence", even tho a guard was always along, these trips were looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure.

