It is clearly understood that the size of a city's population has a effect upon the advancement of social life.

From the beginning of this nation people of all races mingled among each other. Since they have immigrated from different places they have different ways of thinking + doing things. All of these customs + culture are gathered + made into one way of living.

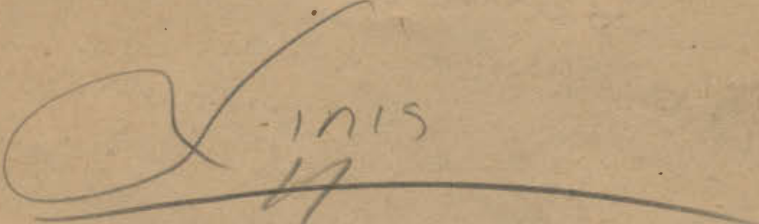

Out of a large crowd or population you are bound to find a person capable of leading you out of heavy burdens of life. Of course, everyone must co-operate to his or her fullest strength in order to help in making a good city.

Out of a ~~big~~ large population you will find good teachers to build ~~the~~ schools, colleges & universities; priests & preachers to start Sunday School & churches; a committee to see that the town is running smooth; persons capable of starting a thriving industry, skilled & unskilled labourers to run the industries & good recreation leaders to watch the children.

Not all good things come out of a large population ~~land~~ because there is bound to be a slum section & "bread lines" which is a big problem to any big city. These problems may be taken care of by a Social Welfare Committee, Sanitation Corps, Hospitals & by getting better housing facilities. It is easy to say it but one cannot just do it right away. Plans are being made all over the U.S.

to get rid of these problems. Many plans are still being planned + I wouldnt doubt it a bit if all the slums ~~wouldnt~~ will be demolished in the next few years.
