

Yorimi Matsumoto
Sociology

Size of Population as a Molder of Society.

In a galaxy of human minds, there is knowledge. In knowledge, there is wisdom. Civilization is the result of society. The cities are the cynosure of modern eyes. As the result of population in the cities, there is a better financial backing; thus better education, recreation, and protection. But, to every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. This is the social problems. To every slum districts, there is an equal amount of vine-covered residents decorated with the flights of martlets, surrounded in a Lydian air. To every juvenile delinquency, there is a proportionate number of gifted individuals.

In the rural districts, the demand of social standards as to the cities cannot be met. But the condition in the country have advantage in ^{the} hygiene of human bodies.

Un finished