

THE CALL OF THE TRAIL.

The call of the wild is not over the sea
It comes from the west, the trail is free
My automobile is the castle key
That opens the western world to me.

The sweep of the hills in their distant view
Nor the roll of the plains I never knew
Till the Call of the Trail lured me out to view
The wonderful spots where the west is new.

The West is the place for the "Vagabond Lover" of nature and the outdoors. Highways go nearly everywhere, even to the tops of the mountains, and quiet trails lead to secluded beauty spots away from the crowd. To roam all day and camp at night beneath the pines and aspens beside a murmuring stream at the foot of a mountain makes a perfect (Rocky Mountain) day.
