Staff Members Tour WFA Labor Camps, See Conditions, Watch Laborers

More than 1800 evacues, the majority of them from Hunt, are now working in nearby counties, on private farms and in War Food Administration Campy, reaping the nation's crops. The number, estimated by Chester L. Mink, relocation officer for this area, comes near to that reached last year, but still more help is needed.

On an inspection tous covering several counties, two IRRIGATOR staff members saw some of the evacues workers from Hunt hand at

It was a revealing and educational tour for the both of them who had never ventured beyond the center gates very far.

The ideal or idea of a certain thing sometimes does not coincide with the reality. This was true of these farms and labor campa. It is true, that all of these War Food Administration camps have government deleticans and medical supervisors, but the characteristics of each camp were varied. In the structure of the buildings, in its occupants, in the unconscious mannerisms of the camp managers, was revealed the manner in which the camp and its occupants were getting along.
