Nisei Loyalty Pointed Out By WRA Aide

R. B. Cozzens Has Praise for Former Bainbridge People

The loyalty of American-born Japanese who have resided in this country their entire lives has been proved on practically all counts at the four relocation centers under his supervision, B. R. Cozzens, assistant national director of the WRA, declared in Seattle this week, according to the Seattle P. I. The Bainbridge Islanders, who were the first to have been evacuated, proved one of the finest groups at the Manzanar center, he said. The people from Bainbridge were transferred at their own request and now are residents of Hunt.

TROUBLE WITH KIBEI

"Most of the trouble we have had," Cozzens said, "has been with the kibei."

"Not all the kibei are disloyal by any means, however," he said. "All of the men who volunteered for the army, to serve as Japanese language instructors for soldiers, were naturally from this class, as no others had sufficient knowledge of both Japanese and English for such

"But most of the instructors are men who have spent most of their boyhood in this country. It's the kibei who were taken back to Ja-pan before they were ten years old that we have to watch."

ANSWER FARM CALL

Cozzens mentioned the manner in which center residents meet the call for seasonal farm work and explained the relocation channels which are open for the evacuees

He said that in no case are the Japanese being permitted to re-turn to Seattle or any other military zone.

The Tule Lake, Manzanar, Poston and Gila River projects are under the jurisdiction of Cozzens.

Purchase of Bonds Urged

Hunt residents were urged this week by Gilbert White, chairman of the Jerome County Second War Loan Campaign, to fill their war savings stamp books and trade them for a bond by April 30, the date set for the ending of the first part of the drive.

White visited here Wednesday to contract acting postmaster T. Umino and others about the sale of war savings stamps in Hunt.

Jerome county's quota is $256,000, while the government's campaign goal is $13,000,000,000, White mentioned. Jerome county will get credit for bond sales on which Hunt is given as the home address. The bonds do not have to be bought in this county.

The slogan of the Second War Loan drive is "They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

War saving stamps are available within the project at the post office and the Co-op stores.

Parent-Soldier Group Will Hold Initial Meeting

The first meeting of the newly-organized Japanese-American Parent-Soldier Association will be held April 19 at 7:30 p. m. in D. H. 23, Selichi Hara, temporary chairman of the organizing committee, announced this

At this time, the constitu-tion will be drafted and an election of officers will be held, Hara said. Other busi-ness pertaining to this or-ganization will also be dis-

Cancer Control Work Introduced

Diagnosis in Early Stages Cited Helpful

By Special Act of Congress in 1938, April is "Cancer Control Month." Each April, the American Society for the Control of Cancer conducts a nation-wide educational and enlistment campaign to advance the fight against the disease which kills 160,000 persons annually.

The work of the organization was introduced to the center this week by Waka Mochizuki of Community Activities who received communications and literature on the subject from heads of the Idaho Worman's Field Army of the Idaho Women's Field Army of the So-

Meanwhile, Dr. L. M. Neher, Principal Medical Officer, issued a statement expressing thanks to the Society for the work it is doing to publicize cancer control.

"This work, which is an attempt to bring about earlier knowledge of cancer and thereby increase the chances for cure, is of utmost importance," Dr. Neher said, "as most cancerous growths can be cured if diagnosed in the early stages."

Information pamphlets sent to Miss Mochizuki by Mrs. R. A. Pomeroy, State Commander, and Mrs. R. S. Stringfellow, State Publicity Chairman, of the Idaho Women's Field Army, emphasized that cancer can be cured only if it is discovered early and treated promptly.

Philip Schafer, the project's assistant director, spoke to a Jerome B. P. W. group last Monday. Discussing "The Implications of Peace," he gave some of the facts about Hunt and discussed the relocation of residents from the camp.

Savage Language School Seeks 250 Qualified Nisei

New Class in Specialized Japanese Will Start Study July 1, States Lt. Rusch

Pleased with its success and with the high calibre of nise recruited at the relocation centers for special training, the Army is again planning to select for its Army Language School at Savage, Minn., an additional class of 250 enlisted men, according to word received this week by Project Director H. L. Stafford from Lieutenant Paul F. Rusch, assistant director of personnel at the Savage school.

The excellent performance of the men who volunteered for this service from the relocation centers during the past year justifies the

Project Offers Flood Relief Aid

In Shoshone Area
The facilities of this center have been offered to John A. Keith, Office of Civilian Defense Commander for Lincoln County, to assist in flood relief in the Shoshone area where the Big and Little Wood rivers continued to rise and threatened highway bridges early this week. Shoshone schools were dismissed Tuesday and all school bus schedules were cancelled. Cots and blankets will probably be the biggest contribution by the project in the event families in the Shoshone area are made homeless by the flood,

Was Attempting to Crawl Thru Fence, Commandant Reports

Commandant Reports

TOPAZ, Utah—Failing to heed four warnings from sentries in two watch towers, James Hatsuki Wakasa, 62, resident of the central Utah relocation center, was shot and killed by a military police sentry at 7:30 p. m. last Sunday.

According to a report Monday by the commandant of the military police to Lorne Bell, acting project director, Wakasa was attempting to crawl through the fence surrounding the residential area when he was warned by the sentries.

Millard county authorities were notified and a military board of inquiry is investigating.

A graduate of a college in Japan, Wakasa, a native of Japan, came to the United States in 1903 and took two years of postgraduate work at the University of Wisconsin.

A resident of San Francisco prior to evacuation, he was a chef by trade. He also served as civilian instructor in cooking at Camp Dodge, Iowa, during World War I.

Gives Figures to Aid Evacuees Relocating

Evacuees Relocating
The cost of living at the present time in most of the cities of the Middle West where a considerable number of Hunt residents are expected to relocate in private employment, is lower than in San Francisco. In at least three cities the living costs have not yet gone up as high as those which prevailed in San Francisco in December, 1941, according to the latest figures made public by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor. These three cities are Kansas City, Indiancities are Kansas City, Indian-apolis and Denver. While the figures given in the report are for larger cities, it was indicated that living costs in rural areas are generally lower and that smaller cities follow closely the trend in the larger centers in each

A worker's income of $150 a month in San Francisco in December, 1941, is taken as the base on which these figures were prepared. In order to buy the same quantities of goods and services, which this $150 income would buy in San Francisco in December, 1941, the San Francisco worker now would require an income of $167.54. This budget is for a family of four persons and takes into account food, clothing, rent, utilities, house furnishing and miscellaneous goods and services.

To maintain the same standard of living in February, 1943, in other selected cities, the following income would be required: Chicago $163.41; Cincinnati $151.75; Cleveland $160.36; Detroit $163.52; Indianapolis $146.77; Milwaukee $157.23; Kansas City $142.84; Minneapolis $156.44; New York $168.28; St. Louis $156.19; Denver $147.72, and Washington, D. C., $166.52. worker's income of $150 a

General DeWitt as Race-Baiter

It might apologetically be said of Lieutenant General John L. De-Witt that he couldn't help saying what he did say the other day about Japanese Americans because he has so long been in California where race prejudice, as sunkist and abundant as its oranges, is always in full bloom. But he who got slapped is in no mood to make that allowance. For, begging the General's pardon, the Japanese American who happens to be red, white and blue through and through—diehard opinions to the contrary nothwithstanding—is pretty damn sore.

The red, white and blue Japanese American was not unremittingly sore at the General when the evacution orders were issued by the latter a year ago: he appreciated the military considerations that were among the propelling forces behind his removal from his home on the Coast. But he is sore now, and for an absolutely legitimate reason. He is sore, and he knows it is thoroughly American to get hopping mad when he is called something else. It might apologetically be said of Lieutenant General John L. De-when he is called something else.

It is a sure bet that the War Department will hear a lot of plair talk from a lot of Japanese Americans. And they who write in their protests and demand that amends be made for General DeWitt's damaging and completely unfair remarks will not be speaking for those whose loyalty may be open to question. The protests and the demand will come from the thousand Japanese Americans who have volunteered to serve as front-line shooting fighters in the same army to which the General belongs, and from the five thousand who are already in

There is no point in disputing here the General's plainly off-center allegation that we are "a dangerous element, whether loyal or not." It would be a waste of time and space to comment lengthily upon the utterly ludicrous absence of sense, discretion and logic in the statement. Even the loyal may be "a dangerous element" to the General, but the War Department knows different.

General DeWitt is a thoroughly efficient and capable military commander, as the evacuees well know—but as a commentator on Japan-mander, as the evacuees well know—but as a commentator on Japan-ese American loyalty, he is something less than admirable. It shouldn't be necessary, but somebody ought to tell the General that most Americans accept the word of the President that this war is being fought for the Four Freedoms and is not a race war.

Project Food Shortage A Possibility

Project Food Shortage A Possibility

Everybody has heard enough about food shortage in the nation and the reasons for rationing. But not very many people in this center realize that the national food pinch affects our eating, and that it is distinctly possible that we may not have enough to eat next fall and winter. Unless the residents here supply sufficient manpower to put over the agricultural program for the center, we will be bearing the same discomfort with respect to satisfaction of our appetites that we experienced last fall and winter with respect to fuel before the organization and manning of the coal division.

The project farm program is behind schedule. It is lagging because not enough men are on hand to do the irrigation and soll preparation work. Individuals employed in the different departments who were farmers before evacuation are being transferred to the agricultural division, and school children and volunteers from various work divisions are serving as shock-troops to speed the preparations for food raising. But they are not enough.

serving as shock-troops to speed the preparations for food raising. But they are not enough.

Sure, it pays only sixteen dollars a month, and the work may be a little harder than pencil-pushing. The point to remember, however, is that people usually are unhappy if they do not have enough to eat, and it is very unlikely that there are any among us who are exceptions to this rule.

The tangibles and intangibles of which people seem to be made of make the meatiest topics for discussion during bull sessions. A slight pall hangs over those sitting in since the words used in the tearing apart of personalities seem to be stolen; not rightfully theirs to utter. The same words could be applied to give a tailored picture of one of those sitting in. They, of course, are automatically not considered for discussion because they are present. But there are things about those indiscretions which can't be resisted.

Once the flow of words runs into a tide, nothing can turn it

"J— is nothing like what he makes himself out to be. I would call him a Pagliacci," says the call him a Pagliacci," says the first speaker. He points out the disagreement between his manner with casual acquaintances and fellow workers and his manner with select intimates. According to the speaker, J—'s slap-on-the-back approach to the masses is merely one side of the coin which is a token of the lack of a successful resolving of private problems. His home life isn't very happy, the bull sessionists are told.

Everyone of us know him and we do not take malicious delight over his shortcomings. J—'s adjust-ment towards us seem to be as good as adjustments go. Someone, if he had the time, would like to remind every one that all this is harmless until it is told to others who, not knowing J—, would retain facts torn out of his character con would retail text.

Another speaker takes over the floor and says:

"While we're at this tearing peo while we're at this tearing people apart business—" (Just as when you daydream, it is safer to first remind yourself of what you're doing, it makes less an inroad on your anti-habit forming inclinations if you are conscious of the fact that you are talking about

But these were more or less the voices of experience. Nothing short of criminal are the charges brought against people arising merely through hearsay or from the feeling that your prestige is upped from the recounting of supposed choice tales involving the helpless and absent victims.

And our psychological insight being as rudimentary as it is, judgments on people are luxuries we can't afford. We are bound to only what we know from actual contact and experience. If judgments are attempted we may not only be hitting on the wrong tack; we may expose motives best not

Spotted Fever

Only Two Cases in Past 5 Years Is Record of Jerome County

Disease Transmitted Through Bite of Wood Tick

"Rickettsia Prowazeki" in the United States, "Tsutsugamushi" in Japan, commonly known now by the familiar name, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, is a disease first discovered in the Northwest part of the United States. Although first thought to be confined to that area, spotted fever has been discovered in States east of the Mississippi, and is now thought to be quite general throughout the United States.

This disease is transmitted by an interior occupations necessitate their exposure to tick bites are advised to wear high boots and heavy socks, and to have upper garments well tucked inside the lower, with a minimum of openings and seams in clothing, and to examine themselves several times daily for the presence of ticks.

Care should be exercised in the removal of the ticks from the skin or clothing. They should never be crushed between the fingers. It is estimated that a tick must

Serum On Hand For Field Workers Only

The U. S. Public Health Service's tick laboratory at Hamilton, Mont., has supplied the project hospital with enough Rocky Mountain spotted fever serum to immunize residents planning to leave the center for areas where leave the center for areas where the disease is prevalent, it was announced this week.

The incidences of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in this area are as low as on the Pacific Coast, the hospital reported, and only ordinary precautions are necessary after excursions into the sagebrush ty. Both victims recovered. Laboratory studies have shown that in this area most of the ticks do not carry the infecting organism. For this reason and since the available supply of serum will suffice to immunize only an approximate 80, 000 people, mass immunization of all individuals here is neither necssary nor practical.

Individuals planning on field work outside the center limits and desiring immunizations, are asked to see Dr. L. M. Neher, Principal Medical Officer, at the hospital. It will not, however, be necessary to immunize persons remaining in the center, Dr. Neher said.

However, individuals planning to leave the project for outside employment where the incidence of the disease is higher can obtain immunization by making applications with Dr. Neher, Principal Medical efficient at the project heavier. tions with Dr. Neher, Principal Medical officer, at the project hospital. Officer, a tthe project hospital. The immunization procedure consists of three injections of 1 c. c. each, at weekly intervals, and causes approximately the same reaction as do typhoid fever shots. Although the incidence of the disease on the project is very low,

Care should be exercised in the removal of the ticks from the skin or clothing. They should never be crushed between the fingers. It is estimated that a tick must feed about an hour before transmitting the infection to man.

REMOVED WITH TWEEZERS

Ticks are best removed with small forceps or tweezers, and care small forceps or tweezers, and care should be taken to wash the hands after handling the ticks. The site of a bite should be painted with Iodine, mercurochrome or any other antiseptic. As the head of a tick is easily severed and left under the skin, it is advisable to pour coal oil or turpentine a drop at a time, or apply a burning cigarette to the body of a tick until it releases its head from the skin, while pulling the tick with a tweezer at the same time. The infection often starts from the head of a tick left in the skin. If infection is suspected, proper treatment should be received immediately at the hospital.

The greatest incidence is during the spring and summer months, (April, May, June and July) after the ticks have emerged from the ground and have entered into the adult stage.

FEED ON MICE TOO

Ticks can feed on mice and other small rodents, as well as dogs and large mamals. Animals bitten by an infected tick have a symptomless infection, but may act as temporary reservoirs of the disease for normal ticks which feed on them. Hence the disease may are them. Hence, the disease may exist indefinitely in nature, with man only an accidental and occasional

Model Room Ready For Inspection; Total Cost $22

The model apartment at 23-6-A will be open to public inspection beginning Monday, April 19, from 1 to 5 p. m. and from 6:30 to 10:30 p. m. The apartment, designed by George Nakashima, shows how a typical barrack room may be made more liveable by using scrap lumber and natural materials.

Nakashima, former Portland and Nakashima, former Portland and Seattle architect, did most of the carpentry work. Tables, shelves, chairs, lamps and screening partitions were made from scrap materials, bitterbrush and willow, with tools available to any resident of the community. Most of these articles are collapsible or demountable and removable when necessary. Total cash expenditures sary. Total cash expenditures amounted to $22, including lumber not considered scrap, nails, putty, paint and monks cloth.

JEROME, IDAHO

At a recent gathering of Central Ohio sportsmen in Columbus, Ohio Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt of the Ohio State Supreme Court stated that competitive sports are indispensable and should be main-tained and encouraged at all times.

The chief justice declared:

"During the past year we have heard and read many views on the question whether we should dis-continue temporarily the competitive sports program we have developed throughout our nation—especially in our high schools, colleges and universities. Some of these views have been so utterly at variance that there is no possibility of reconcilling them.

"However, some facts should be clear. We are engaged in the most devastating conflict in recorded history. The war must be won. In history. The war must be won. In developing the necessary maximum efficiency in the horrible process of killing and destruction that we politely designate as modern warfare, the qualities of courage, initiative, resourcefulness, leadership, quick thinking, competitive spirit, and physical fitness are indispensable for success. Fortunately these are qualities that likewise are needed in the saner pursuits of peaceed in the saner pursuits of peace

"Hence, any program—such as competitive sports—tending to de-velop these qualities is recommendvelop these qualities is recommended even though large crowds may not attend. While this is a consideration, it should in no sense be decisive of the problem. The size of the crowd is not the measure of the worth of an athletic contest. All of us have had the experience of witnessing poor games played before large crowds and excellent ones played before small crowds. The boys not yet in the armed forces should have an opportunity to participate in competitive sports even if the crowds dwindle.
