Hearings Determine Evacuee Delegate Election WASHINGTON Relocation Eligibility Relocation Eligibility

Meetings Obtain Evidence Concerning Individual Attitude Toward U.S.; Obligations of Citizenship

Regardless of whether a person wants to relocate at this time, it is necessary for residents to appear for a leave clearance hearing, which is a part of the investigation to determine eligibility for leave, when called upon to do so, according to a press release from WRA at Washington. This does not mean that a person will have to relocate when clearance is established, it was assured. It

The cases are then reviewed by a Washington board which makes recommendations to the director. Final determinations of leave eligibility are made by the director.

Not intended as trials or cross examinations, the hearings are in-terviews at which each person has an opportunity to state simply and plainly his or her attitude on basic

Evacuees Warned About Proper Return to Project

If an evacuee out on indefinite leave returns to a relocation center without proper justification of the relocation officer, he may not hereafter be granted an indefinite or seasonal work without prior approval of the Director, according to a new revised handbook on Issuance of Leaves.

Evacuees who obtain indefinite leaves are not expected to return to relocation centers because they have been granted leave for the purpose of re-establishing themselves on a permanent basis. But if an evacuee finds it impossible to maintain employment or residence outside, he may apply to the near est relocation Officer for permisest relocation Officer for permission to return to a center. The Relocation Officer will then investigate the application and make an effort to enable the applicant to remain on indefinite leave. As a last resort the Relocation Officer may certify to the Project Director that the circumstances of a particular case warrant an evacuee's return and the Project Director will re-admit the evacuee upon such a certification.

Two Years Ago December 7

On that fateful December 7 two years ago, the enemy From that day a train of events started that has changed the course of every man's life, regardless of race. Out of that black day in history grew evacuation, and all persons of Japanese ancestry on the West Coast were uprooted from their homes and their businesses to temporary relocation centers.

During these two years, youth achieved manhood and the elderly started again at the bottom in a new way of life.

Once the evacuees had time to take stock of themselves they began to look about. Their plight was made a little easier by the faith and understanding of the WRA and of fellow Americans east of the western defense area.

Already, many men and women have moved back into the normal streams of American life. They are compiling an enviable record by their deeds and their attitudes.

In Savage, in Shelby and on far fluing fronts, our boys have dedicated themselves to the complete erasure of that day that placed the dark blot of deceit and treachery upon innocent people who happened to be of the same ancestry as

As we look upon that day of infamy, we can feel pride in the way we have conducted ourselves since. We can take deep pride in our record of loyalty to our country.

With the Allied Nations striding toward ultimate victory, with our group doing its part, however small, the future of our hopes burns ever brighter each passing day.

Remember Pearl Harbor and strive harder than ever to make it be the symbol of a minority people tried without precendent and not found wanting.-k.t.

Smoother Road Ahead

This week Mr. Solon Kimball from the WRA office in Washington brought with him a Charter approved and ready for our acceptance. That Charter is a valuable document. It means better understanding between WRA and ourselves. It means, that we too, will be able to exercise our inalienable right—the right and privilege of the ballot.

It means that we will have proper representation in whatever is being done in the way of Community Management. It means that whatever happens the voice of the people will be heard and understood.

Misunderstandings are bound to arise, and without proper representation of the people it is difficult to iron out these matters.

It is only natural that the WRA and evacuee viewpoints are different on many matters. There needs to be a common meeting place where the two views can meet and differences can be settled as they should be with common dignity and respect.

The voice of the people must be heard in any community. It safeguards rights and discourages abuses. The administration has expressed willingness in the past to discuss differences of opinion on matters of concern to the colony. But the representatives of the people have not been truly representative in some cases.

This important link between WRA and the residents cannot be forged without the whole-hearted support, the active support of every resident.

Supporting bands of Roll that the active support and the contortions necessary to active support of every resident.

The next morning, I resolved to get up a second earlier than on the previous morning. After the usual "bargain day" rush consuming ap-proximately half an hour, I dashed out to the laundry area and with a hopeful gleam in my eyes, listened for the truck to come.

I waited and waited. I waited some more. By this time, I was beginning to wonder if I would not have done better had I walked to work. My feet were slowly him. work. My feet were slowly but surely becoming numb. My nose, I know, was getting redder. My beautiful pin curls were beginning to wilt, the result of the early morning dew. Finally, when the smoke stacks on the laundries began to show shape against the advancing dawn, and when my body's frozen posture almost equalled the silent and still silhouette of the puny tree standing in front of me, succor, in the form of a covered truck turned the bend in the road and came to a standstill—20 feet away. Wedging myself through the milling crowd who were bent on one thing and one thing only, on one thing and one thing only, that of maneuvering oneself onto that truck, I finally managed to hoist myself on. The interior was very dark, but many people were trying to get on so the "move to the front of the truck" movement. was THE thing to do. We moved. When we were packed like sar-dines, the driver decided that the rehicle was loaded to capacity and acted upon his decision.

We Still Have a Chance to Lose Both War and Peace—Tibesar

(ED. NOTE: This is the second article reprinted from the Seattle Times, written by the Rev. L. H. Tibesar, Maryknoll Missionary at Hunt.

No, they have not grown lazy. The type of work possible to them in camp just cannot be as strenu-ous as that to which circumstances forced them before evacuation and they also live very close together; sometimes two families share the same apartment.

Probably no other race of people have stood up under the trial of evacuation like this people did. They had hardly landed here in a cloud of dust when they set about planting a garden. Most of them brought slips of flowers with them as mementos of Seattle or the Valley. The place has since become a riot of flowers. a riot of flowers.

The fact is, we can't arford to lose the war, nor can we afford to lose the peace after it. If we are to win the war we must get used to the idea of the hands-across-the-

The truth is we need the Orient and we need the Oriental in our midst. Our Intelligence services could hardly function without them in time of war. In time of peace they have never been the problem to us some individuals would have us suppose. We just haven't been big enough to give them a chance. In a way they are getting one now and they will use it.

The prevailing sentiment one finds on the war here in these camps is the wish that it might all end soon and that the countries engaged in it are all ruining them-selves financially over something that might better have been settled amicably.

Most of the heads in here are old ones and view this world's affairs with a detachment that is surpriswas that of the California Newspaper Publishers' association, which in its Los Angeles meeting condemned the "hush-hush" policy of the war relocation authority at the time of the disorders. A soldier friend from the south tells us he stopped at the Twin Falls bus depot before coming to Hunt and he was taken aback at the sight of the waiting room filled with Japanese . . . and to top it off, "a little kid knee-high runs around the room jabbering in Japanese." Courtesy and thoughtfulness which have too often been forgotten by the young people, were still in evidence at a recent dance. Re freshment time was announced and while all others dashed heedlessly to grab a place in line and become engrossed in eating, on the side lines a patron and patroness from the appointed personnel sat unattended. Seeing them, a young girl, who was in no way connected with the sponsorship of the dance, took it upon herself to go up to the counter and graciously take the plates of refreshments to them. Stafford, Huntville Elementary Schools Observe Book Week

Many new books for both the Stafford and Huntville Elementary schools are arriving, announced T. M. Heyerdahl, assistant librarian,

The fifth and sixth graders all participated in a book jacket designing contest. Two prizes were awarded for the best ones in each grade at both schools with the elementary school teachers acting as indiges.

Outstanding non-fiction books which are now available at both the high school and community libraries are "Journey Among Warriors" by Eve Curie and John Roy Carlson's "Under Cover."

Sixty New Books Added to Library

Sixty new books were received at the high school library this week and will be placed on the shelves sometime next week, according to Louise Ruble, project

M. Heyerdahl, assistant librarian, this week.

A number of books were also received as gifts from the University of Washington.

National Book Week was observed at the Huntville and Stafford Elementary schools with many original and colorful displays at their respective libraries.

The fifth and sixth graders all participated in a book jacket developed to Louise Ruble, project librarian.

Almost every type of book is represented in the new collection, including fiction, non-fiction, science, and reference books.

Of interest to the girls will be Katherine Orbison's "Handbook for Nurse's Aides." Another book which should prove interesting to the boys is "Jiu-jitsu" in the form of lessons and illustrations.

The evacuee group in Denver is thus predominately a California group.

A large proportion of this early group of evacuees were unskilled workers, many had never held jobs before. There was a big de-mand for agricultural, personal service and domestic workers and it was into this type of work that many of the nisei went. However, as time went by, better jobs in a wider variety began to open up. Clerical jobs, office jobs and defense plant jobs are now available to the Japanese Americans,
