Contrary to rumors now circulating in the center, no one will be kept from going to Idaho for the remainder of the beet season and no one will be drafted into local livestock project when it is ready to begin, announced the Agricultural Division.

Over '75 residents have already filed their applications for the livestock project and this is more than the sufficient quota, according to Chief Clerk Y. Amamoto. He said that although more may sign up for this project, only a certain number will be accepted from the lot to actually work at that project.

Anti-Japanese Law In Business Ruled Unconstitutional

PHOENIX, July 13—A law prohibiting business transactions with Japanese without publication of notice was ruled unconstitutional today. The law also applied to "other" persons whose movements are restricted."

Superior Judge M. T. Phelps, who handed down the ruling in a suit brought by Tsutemu Ikeda, a Japanese denied a motion of the Attorney General's Office to dismiss the complaint.

Camp Savage Calls For More Linguists

Stressing the point that the special Janguage talent of the niseis is now a critical war material, the Army Language School at Savage, Minnesota issued another call for volunteers. The Savage School, lauding the work of the nisei soldiers already in the various branches of the service, stated that many more linguists are needed.

Those niseis with knowledge of the Japanese language who are interested and desire information are urged to write to Commandant, Camp Savage, Savage, Minnesota, or to make inquiry to Project-Director Raiph P. Merritt.

The Army Language School also ainounced that recruiting parties would visit all reflection centers in the near future. The group is expected in Manzanar about the middle of this month.

DISPOSSESSION OF PROPERTY

The desire to own property is one of man's instinctive urge. It cannot be erased by the process of restrictive legal interpretation or legislative action undertaken in the heat of emotional stress. Not so long as America believes in the inherent virtues of private ownership and private capital. There is no quarrel at this particular point with the specific conditions laid down by the legislators for limiting such ownerships.

Across the northern border from Idaho, where many of our boys have worked in the fields, are another group of Japanese, the Canadian Japanese, who were evacuated from the British Columbia coastal areas at the outset of the war. Some 23,000° of them. Now, they are confronting one of the series of aftermaths to the evacuation. The Dominion government decreed that Fraser Valley farm properties owned but vacated by the evacuees shall be sold to the Director of the Veterans' Land Act for future transfer to, the British Columbians now serving in the armed forces. fer to the British Columbians now serving in the armed forces.
TRANSFER IN EFFECT

TRANSFER IN EFFECT
The transfer, according to latest dispatches already has been effected. The Japanese, however, are raising the legal point that the burden of proof lies with the director to show that he is entitled to be regarded as the owner for purposes of future disposition of the property. The curious interpretation put by the Dominion authorities on their presumed right to undertake this wholesale dispossession is worth noting.

As the Japanese newspaper, The New Canadian, puts it, the only way the director under the act can acquire land is by agreement with the land owner. However, the government apparently takes the view that in case of the Japanese properties, it is not necessary to have the consent of the owners because under a related government order such property is deemed to be vested in the Custodian and that the Custodian as the owner of the property could transfer the land to the director under the Veterans' Land Act.

Act.

This legal razzle-dazzle is just so much shennanigans insofar as the helpless Japanese land owners are concerned. One is tempted to make strange comparisons of this act with the Nazi methods in Europe. An uncalled for comparison, we think; we who believe in the ultimate democratic solution of warborne problems of the United Nations.

By An Ardent Cooperator'

Amazed with the financial success of our Co-op, I feel that we have temporarily forgotten to direct our attention, to and evaluate the social aspect of our co-operative organization. This Co-op was originally started with the intention of following the time-tested cooperative formulae commonly referred to as the Rochdale Principles.

Unfortunately the hy-laws of Rechdale Principles.

Unfortunately the by-laws of our Co-op were drawn up in such a manner that, to this date, the appointed personnel are precluded from membership in our cooperative. This is a very unhappy situation in view of the fact that, by denying this basic cooperative privilege to the appointed personnel, we are deliberately weakening one of the strongest pillars which support all successful cooperatives.

DIFFERENCE NEGLIGIBLE

The chief objection to the admission of appointed personnel to our organization is that the apparent income of the A.P.'s far exceed that of evacues. A closer scrutiny of the various factors affecting our economic welfare will readily reveal that this difference is largely "illusory" and that the difference in real income is negligible in many cases. Also that the difference in real income is negligible in many cases. Also, why deny them membership when we have constantly and tacitly allowed these same people to use our cooperative facilities. As a minority group in this country, we must realize that by acquiescing to this discriminatory provision in our by-laws, we are unconsciously nurturing that unpleasant, insidious force commonly called race prejudice. Isn't it true that the Caucasians are the minority in this camp? How can we as a minority ask for fair play when we ourselves do not can we as a minority ask for fair play when we ourselves do not accord fair treatment to our fel-low men who are working side by side with us? I hope this note will strike a favorable and re-sponsive chord.

Cooperative Signs Written Agreement,

A written agreement licensing the Manzanar Cooperative to con-duct its enterprises within the center was signed by the Project Director and the president and secretary of the Cooperative Board on July 8th. The license is subject to cancellation by either party upon 30 days notice.

Because only enterprises which have licenses granted under such operating agreements can operate within the WRA Centers, the Manzanar Coop has the only license to operate such enterprises in Manzanar.

This camp resembles Manzanar in many respects, especially in the growth of the camp? Sprouting from what once used to be a desert wasteland which sheltered snakes, rabbits and turtles, this project has blossomed forth into one of the finest centers for the Japanese evacuees. The lay of the blocks are similar to those in Manzanar, except that we here have two less barracks per block. SPORTS...BASEBALL SPORTS...BASEBALL their AA and A brackets will soon take the limelight.

Although handicapped with sloping fields and cramped diamonds, and also playing with a tenth man as a roving shortstop, slappin down those sure hits over second base, the players here have turned in envious batting averages. Leading the Double A batters was F. Kishi, blasting out a sizzling 7.14, with runner-up T. Shimizu and his even .600, and Su Fukuyama in the third spot with a .583.

In the Single A league, M. Sakaguchi in seven games batted a .650, N. Kuwatani close on his heels with an impressive .632.

Timbers Nip Knights

Coming from behind in the last

Coming from behind in the ląst inning, the Timbers overcame a two-run lead to nip the Manzaknight B's, 14-13, Thursday eve.
While the Manzaknights were busy mustering their 11 runs in the first three innings, the Timbers were held to four runs.
The tide turned in the last half of the game as the Timbers found their range and battered the pill for 10 runs, greatly aided by the Knights' errors and passes. Two suns for the B's were chalked up in the same period, highlighted by a 4-bagger by Genzo Nishida. B. Yamane was the victors' hurler.
