Japanese vegetable growers excluded from California by popcluded from California by pop-ular feeling there are settling in large agricultural colonies else-where in the country, determin-ed to undercut California veget-able prices on the Eastern mar-ket after the war as a revenge on California, Hearst Writer Ray Richards declares in the Los An-geles Examiner.

"....low Japanese living standards, plus a high state of organization under the Central Japanese Association and financing by a branch of the Bank of Japan, the Yokohama Specie Bank, taught West Coast vegetable growers before the war just how rulnous Japanese competition can be," he said.

He notes that warning of the postwar plans of the Japanese was sent in a letter to the California Producers Growers Association by Kilsoo Haan, representative of the Sino-Korean Peoples League

Haan told the Produce Growers Association Headquarters of Los Angeles that the Japanese are counting on financial assistance from American elements that supported the new deal in its successful campaign to persuade the Army to reopen the West Coast to Japanese before the war is ended. Reverend Morikawa Bàptizes Chicago Japanese 'Hater'

CHICAGO— A war worker, who had wanted to quit his lob because a Japanese American was employed at the plant was later baptized by a Nisei reverend, Julia Edwards revealed in a story appearing in the Chicago Daily News.

Miss Edwards reported that a friend took his anti-Nisei war worker to the First Baptist chur-ch to hear the Reverend Jitsuo Morikawa, a Japanese Ameri-can. The result was that this man was later baptised by the Nisei.

A year ago, when the Rev. Dr. Eric L. Titus, then pastor, urged church members to invite the Reverend Morikawa to minister to them and to welcome relocated Nisei into the congregation, members hesitated. There was fear that the Nisei, would split the church and that membership would drop off. would drop off.

Instead, Caucasian membership has increased considerably, while Nisei membership now totals 150 members.

In commemorating his first an niversary as minister of that church, the Reverend Morikawa declared:

"To me the remarkable fact is not that Baptist have opened their doors to Japanese Ameri-cans but that all have become members of a homogeneous unit without suggestion of difference."

Maruki copped top batting honors for the day with three hits at four trips to the plate. He was left on base as Shiro Nomura grounded out to short for the third out. third out.

third out.
While the Solons went down in order in their half of the first the Manzaknights ran into a 2-0 lead in the second as Kosaka hit to right and Harry Tashima got life on an error on Kenji Morita. Two runs spiked home plate as chucker Jim Morita picked up M. Imai's grounder and threw it to third base before shortstop Tom Ito could cover the bag.

Tom Ito could cover the bag.

Of the seven hits collected off
Jim Morita, one each was registered in the first seven innings.

Still behind 2-0 halfway thru the game the Solons put in one marker in their half of the fourth when Roy Nakashima found one of Kosaka's pitches for a double into left field. Going to third on a pass ball, Nakashima scored when catcher Shiro Nomura blocked Ken Morita's attempt to bunt. Morita was given a base on balls by Umpire Araki. Joe Nakao singled into center but Bill Takeda struck out and Jim Morita grounded to second to end the inning. The two hits by the Solons in that canto were their only hits of the game.

While the Knights annexed one more in the fifth, Solons' Tom Ito got life on an error on Kow
Maruki and scored a moment later on a miscue by Min Kosaka on an infield grounder by Roy Nakashima. Although Roy stole third, attempts to score him failed.
