IOOTH BNGETS UNIT CITATION NISET SPEARHEAD US DRIVE INTO CASSINO

"From a cautious experiment the Army received an unexpectedly rich reward. A group of sinewy; oriental soldiers, only a generation removed from a nation that was fighting fanatically against the U.S., was fighting just as fenatically for it. Last week the War Department wrote "proved" on the experiment. It added a unit citation (for "outstanding performance of duty in action") to the glready remarkable collection of medals hill by the Japanese American 100th Battalion," reported the July 31 issue of Time

megazine:

The article went on to relate how the 100th trained unnoticed at first but were so promising the War Department recruited more men from Mawaii.

When the 100th was sent to North Africa attached to the 34th Division, 500 reserves were taken besides the Battalion's normal 800 and "the reserves were soon this action.

The group described as "good shots, doggedly resistent in combat" had 15 of its enlisted men win battlefield promotions. Combat strength was cut down to 120 men in Cassino whore they had spearheaded the Rapido River crossing. The nisei outflanked and destroyed a German position at Belvedere kill ing, wounding and capturing 271 of the enemy. The 100th was officially cited for Fire Protection Officer John F. Mailes stated that ruch confusion resulted from the Block 16 fire because the party reporting the bleze hed difficulty in reaching the Fire Department, delaying the

These rules should be followed in reporting fire: 1. Learn the location of the nearest telephone.

2. Do not become excited for this makes it harder for the operator to understand.

3. Tell the OPERATOR you mish to report a fire.

4. Tell the operator the exact location of the fire. Example: when the operator enswers, simply say, "There is a fire in the laundry building in Block 16."

The first major fire in the Center's near two-year history was suffered by Block 16 residents Friday afternoon.

The block residents were engaged in feasting unaware that a fire had started from combustible material in . the boiler room. The .blaze was reported about 6:30. The pall of black smoke which preceded the flames crused Rohwerites from the extreme portions of the Center to rush to the spot.

Two shifts of firemen under Assistant Fire Chaif Riley, and Toshimi Dote, evacuee fire chief, sided by former members and other volunteers soon put the blaze out. The damage to the laundry room was set at approximately $700.

Riley asked the cooperation of all residents to keep the Center clear of hazardous materials to prévent further outbreaks.

NISPC

CHARLESTON, W. Va.-Yesterday afternoon I sat on the banks of the Kanawha river and watched the boats go by. And as I sat there, I tried to think of an answer to a question put to me the night before. It was at an inter-racial meeting where I spoke. There were prominent people there: There. educators, ministers, bus-incomen. But it remained for en o'd woman, a Nogro servant; to ask the best Calendar question of the ovening. QUESTION

She came up to me after the meeting was over. She was gray and wrinkled, her face plainly showing the toil of yours. She said she was ashamed to ask such a. silly question in the presence of such distinguished people, so she had waited till the meeting was over. Did I mind? Assured I did not, she began haltingly, finally asked: "Are we fighting to preserve democracy?" STUMPED

Silly, was it? It was sensible question, too sensible. What could tell her? Sure, it would merely be my own opinion. But what could I say? had just finished speaking about the evacuation of 110,000 from the west coast. I had told thim that 72,000 of them were American citizens. I had talked about the relocation conters and how we were confined there. THE SOUTH

I remembored, too, that this was the south. Here the Negroes find themselves faced on all sides by projudice, dis crimination, and sogregation. I can't erase the memory of a railroad station in the south, where I saw Negro soldiers riding in Jim Crow sections, while their white comrades rode in another section. I asked mys olf: "If these boys are to die as Americans, why can't they live as Americans?" COULDN'T ANSWER

EVACUEES WORK IN HEMP MILLS

In a front page story headlined "Jap Evacuees at Union Grove Work in Hemp Plant to Aid U.S.," the July 14 edition of the Racine Journal Times carried a story expressing a very favorable opinion of Jepanese relocatees.
The 17 workers who are expected to be swelled to 60 are all middle-aged and from Rohwer. They receive 60 cents an hour working in a government owned hemp mill, part of a national project to alleviate the hemp shortage which followed the outbreak of war. .

"We have been so kindly treated by men and womon in Kansasville and Union Grove that we are very happy. We like them much, " spokesman T. Fujioka was quoted as saying about the Wisconsin towns.

I couldn't answer that old lady. Ferhaps you could have. but I could't, for I keen that we were not fighting to preserve that kind of democracy. Yet, when I read the papers and see some shortsighted politican blustering something about "maintaining the status quo," I begin to have my doubts. I had to tell that old woman that I didn't know and let it go PONDERED

And so yesterday, as I sat on the river banks and watched the boats go by, I thought about the week apoint at Lakeside, where 900 young folks of all races and colors and nationalities--Negroes, whites, Japanese, Chinese--lived harmoniously, fraternally, equally, democratically.

That was the ideal democratic community of tomorrow, exemplified today. And I compared it with the America as it really exists today, in the south and elsewhere. ANSWER

B.I.

And I knew then that we were not fighting to preserve this democracy, the status quo. For if we are striving to preserve that old world, we shall have failed utterly. That democracy, that status quo, that old world wasn't good enough for us. It brought on this war. We need to strive for a better democracy, a democracy on a higher plane. We are fight ing to build a new world, not to preserve the old. And I knew what that new world would be like, and I smiled. For I had seen it and been a part of it at Lakeside.
