POSTON 3 TO FORM PLANNING BOARD

Customers to Save Canteen Receipts

At the latest board of trustees meeting, it was decided that all stores and shops of the 3 Units operated by the Community Enterprises will issue purchase receipts to its customers, beginning January 15. The press release stated, however, that receipt tags will not be issued for any mail order, laundry or cleaning services.

It was advised that residents should save such receipts to claim their "patronage dividend" at a future date. It is anticipated that the net earnings accumulated after a certain fiscal period will be distributed in proportion to the amount of the purchases.

COMMITTEE MEETS TO DISCUSS CAMOUFLAGE NET WORK PLANS

A committee on Camouflage net production, composed of representatives from all three units met at Poston I on Thursday afternoon in order to consider and study various plans and proposals being offered evacuees who will work in the garnishing sheds.

Although a full report on the meeting had not been made by the time the Chronicle went to print, it was learned that a very thorough discussion on the three proposals offered by the army contractors was held.

The group from each unit was expected to give a complete report on the meeting before their respective Community Council and Block Managers. The final decision on the camouflage net project would rest upon the people when all the relevant facts are revealed.

Present at the important meeting were members of the Poston group which recently made a trip to Gila.

WORKERS URGED TO SAVE PAPER

Project employees, were requested to "proceed on the theory of not wasting paper" in conformity with the policy of the Department of Interior, it was directed in WRA order No. 10.

Half-size stationery should be used for all correspondence which do not require additional space. Typing on the reverse side is permissible where the typist has misjudged the length of a letter.

A day's suspension without pay was set as the penalty for each infraction.

An Advisory Planning Committee will be set up to take full responsibility for decisions on land use within the town boundaries of Poston 3. This was the information issued from the office of Administrator Moris Burge yesterday afternoon. A meeting of the board was held last Tuesday.

According to the Unit 3 Administration, the body would arbitrate disputes among various groups over the use of land. In addition, it is to consider requests for land use. The Planning Board will have real authority on all matters of the above nature, it was pointed out. WRA and Army orders, however, will have to be respected.

The committee will consist of evacuee representatives from each of the following departments:

Community Council, Industrial Advisors, Block Managers, Community Activities, PC3A, schools, Industry, Agriculture, Administration, Employment Department.

The time and date for the next meeting will be announced later.

One of the first problems to be faced by the Planning Committee, it was believed, would concern the allotment and distribution of basketball and baseball groups for the various block and club teams.

MAIN CANAL REACHES POSTON 2

With the completion of a few more high gates, the main canal carrying irrigation water to Poston II nears completion.

Tractors are expected to come in soon to prepare ditches for irrigation between barrack

POSTON ENJOYS FREE PRESS

Criticism comes easily, and people are prone to censure without gathering complete information of the relevant facts. The Poston Chronicle expects to receive its share of complaints and profit therefrom, but in regard to recent remarks that this relocation center press has been muffled by strict censorship, the evacuee editorial staff desires to state emphatically that the publication of news and editorials in these pages has been left almost wholly to the discretion and judgment of the managing editor for the day, with no admonitions from the administration.

In this and several other respects, the Poston Chronicle compares favorably with other center publications. A detailed survey of various WRA newspapers recently disclosed that our sheet contained a far greater proportion of news about the residents than administrative reports and instructions in contrast with the other centers. Some, it was noted, are still primarily bulletins of the administration.

Also observed was the fact that the Poston Chronicle issues more pages more times a week than any other evacuee newspaper. Most of them come out but twice, three times, or once a week. The exceptions, besides the Chronicle, are the Daily Tulean Dispatch, which publishes two sheets four times weekly, and the Topaz Times, which issues one sheet daily. We average about eight pages six times a week.

The desirability of putting out a daily sheet, as ascertained through a survey among residents, lay in the truth that in no other way can news be offered to readers while still warm and palatable, figuratively speaking.

THE SAME OF A KIND

California's Native Sons of the Golden West and certain posts of the American Legion, strange as it seems, have one thing in common with the radicals of relocation centers. By some method or another, these groups of a kind would have all persons of Japanese ancestry sent to Japan although the vast majority of us have neither intention nor desire of leaving this country.

The super patriotic organizations mentioned above are planning to snuff our American citizenship, while the evacuee agitator--a misguided few--would assist deportation efforts by opposing every constructive action taken to regain our full rights. It is a touchy and peculiar situation, but the issues could not be any clearer than here. We face a shameless exhibition of fascistic ideas, and we cannot yield in quiet acquiescence to those who would either ship us or lead us to the land of our Axis foe. A strong stand must be taken to show our desires and rights in the matter of our future. We must oppose all the way any attempt to cheat evacuees the rights and privileges of American citizens.

NO, MR. SATAN

When Satan in the voice of your "friend" comes sailing to you and whispers into your ears that you should loaf on your job because, says he,

"What's the use? You're getting only $16 or $19 a month," don't let the devil beguile you. Have a ready answer for him. Tell him frankly and bluntly, "I'm working for my own good, for the invaluable training and work experience, for the genuine enjoyment and satisfaction of doing a job to the utmost of one's ability, and finally, because I know that "taking things easy" would make me soft and weak and less able to resist the temptations and pit falls of the devil.

"No, Mr. Satan, I will never under any circumstances yield so easily to your evil teaching and demoralizing influence upon mankind."

The evil representative from Hell would recoil from this firm argument and strong conviction.

"They have worked indefatigably in the opening and the operating of this mess, and to them as individuals and as a group all credit is due," Burdick's statement read.

CUPID HAS WINGS

He saw her coming so he halted his steps and stood by 'til she approached.

"Hello beautiful!"

"Oh, hi! Don't scare me like that."

He cocked his head to the left, and with arms akimbo, regarded her.

"Gee, red bow, red flowered blouse, red skirt, red socks-- now all you need is a pink parasol. A pretty pink one."

"Pink? That'll clash. A white one--that's better. Besides this isn't red. It's flame-colored."

"Flame," he murmured. "Oh, flame!" he exclaimed with a twang of mockery woven in. "Whose flame?"

"Yes, flame. Never mind the "whose." "Which way are you going?"

"This way," he pointed west.

"Well, go west, young man. I'm going this way." And with a toss of her shiny raven locks she turned in the opposite direction.

"Oh, that's just where I'm going too," he decided.

"All right then. Just don't make yourself too conspicuous."

A group of "dead-enders" straggled by piping:

"There goes beauty and the beast," accompanied by that unmistakable "wolf-whistle--wheee--wheew!"

"Can you stand being called a beast," he offered.

"Don't be so hateful nincompoop." She glanced at her watch. "Goodness, I still have an hour to kill before I go for my appointment. What'll I do?"

"Well, let's see. I get it! Let's amble out and sit by the pines. It's nice out there, y'know."

"No. I'd rather watch the little boys practice football."

She perched on the rails watching tomorrow's All American.

"What do you like best to eat," he ventured after an uncomfortable pause on his part.

"Chow mein."

"Steak. A nice big juicy one. The way they do it at Jim Maggio's. What else do you like?"

No answer.

"Did you ever hate anybody terribly? I mean, did you ever hate anybody?" he insisted again.

"Nope."

"Well then, did you ever like anybody real well--"

"Nope."

"No? Honestly? Then do you think you'll ever like anybody---I mean real well?"

"I dunno. Look! Watch that little kid pass. The one with the Ish Kabibble haircut. Look!"

He eyed her wistfully, but she was genuinely interested that little guy with the Ish Kabibble haircut.

"Listen, dear child, are you a man-hater?"

"Uh huh."

"Any woman in her right senses--"

"Yes, yes, any woman in her right senses would never harbor such idiotic, abnormal ideas. Go on, philosopher." And she turned her gaze toward the children again.

"How long have you been out of high school?"

"Since last June. Why?"

"I guess you'll grow up soon then, huh?" he gibed. "I hope you do by the time I get my next leave, at least."

For once she focused her full attention on him.

"Why'd you wear civvies today? I like uniforms."

"Wait 'til I get my wings." He watched the sunny smile which flitted from dimple to dimple. He grinned.

Several moons traced their glowing paths across the summer skies. And one fine day brought another air-mail-special-delivery. Her tingling fingers slit open the tri-colored envelope.

"He's coming tomorrow--4-hour leave," and her cardiac apparatus pulsated wildly as she fingered the tiny pair of wings enclosed. For a fleeting moment his disgustingly handsome face appeared, and she heard him saying--

"Do you think you'll ever like anybody real well?"

"Maybe," she whispered.
