

POSTON III NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR "NO" VOTE ON NET PLAN

Poston III could not be accused as solely responsible for the rejection of the garnishing project plans, it was disclosed at a special meeting of the Unit III Community Council Friday afternoon. Although the margin of decision was very small, and many rumors held Poston III responsible for the defeat of the net plan, officials present at the meeting stated that votes were mixed. In fact, some considered the high percentage of voting indicated the positive interest of Unit III in the project.

Vernon Kennedy, head of the Poston Employment department, denied that any of the units could be blamed for the slim "no" decision.

Mr. Kennedy declared, "I am very disappointed in the outcome of the voting as I had hoped that the project would work out. If the plan had been adopted the whole community would have been benefited by the revenue that would have come in. I believe that the opinion of most of the people is that the issue was not clear at the time of voting."

From the Heart Mountain Sentinel;

The editorial I enjoyed most this week is the one which appeared in the above mentioned paper, concerning the unsung heroes, could be said of those in this center reads as follows: We write today of Heart Mountain's nameless heroes, the men and women who, unnoticed and unsung, carry out the thousand and one jobs necessary to the welfare and comfort of the citizens of this city.

Many jobs that make the project mechanism click are not interesting nor glamorous nor educational. It's no fun for mess hall crews to rise morning after morning in the frigid dark and go to work while others sleep. But someone must work if everyone is to eat.

The janitors and janitresses who keep the latrines spotless, the boiler tenders, the grease-monkeys who keep the trucks running, the men who unload freight cars come snow (heat) come rain - they're heroes all.

It is something deeper and finer than monetary returns that sustain these people. Perhaps it might be called community responsibility, or a deep-rooted sense of pride in accomplishing of the spirit that is covered in just the word Morale. Whatever it is, it makes one proud to be associated with those people who carry on under circumstances that might have broken the spirits of lesser individuals."
