CONCERNING OUR NEW HOME--- THE FUTURE CITY OF POSTON

POSTON, population today 1543, is situated on the Colorado River Indian Reservation in southwestern Arizona, on a tract of land made available for irrigation by the erection of the Parker Dam. The area has an excellent potential agricultural base--some 80,000 acres of raw land that can be developed for production of a variety of crops. There will be plenty of worthwhile work for everyone. The bringing of the land into cultivation will require construction of laterals and ditches, clearing and leveling of the land. Considerable acreage will be made ready immediately for cultivation and production of subsistence food crops. Then as a public works program, additional acreage will be prepared for cultivation. Also there will be many small industries. There will be schools, hospitals, churches, stores. Self government will prevail. AGAIN, POSTON WELCOMES YOU!
