GENERAL BRADLEY CLARIFIES CLAIMS

Evacues parents of deceased servicemen whose claims for death pensions have previously been rejected by the Veterans Administration and who are now appealing them, should not appeal their claims but should file reclams on the basis of change of circumstances, according to advice received from the WRA in Washington today.

In a letter to WRA, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans' Administrator, explained that the claim did not reflect because evacuees maintained at government expense on relocation projects were not considered dependents within the meaning of the pension Point.

San Francisco—Mrs. Hisayo Fujimoto and her daughter, Tohiko, for members of their race, recently reflected into a apartment reserved for servicemen's families at Ridge Point.

A REPLY

This might be as opportune a moment as any to serve notice to these harping critics that no civilian evacuation is looking for press sympathy of public opinion, or for the sake of the military, although they face a tough period of relocation.

Likewise, it is not within the realm of possibility that the nisei GLB, too, are not looking for special attention or accommodations from the press or public on the strength of their relocation.

The Japanese Americans merely ask for an even break, from the public, in their effort to resettle quietly where they chose. (9-26-45)
