

11th Core Class
Roy O'Kada

From the first time I knew what war was like, I hated it. Maybe the reason for my hatred against it is because it has affected me so much; or maybe it's because I am scared of the horrors of war.

For being so far away from the war, I guess we have been affected the most. Besides getting us evacuated it has turned many people against us. Some people cuss at us on the streets and look at us as though we were a new ^{specie of} animal on exhibit. The war has made me feel so low that sometimes I felt like hiding my head. Every where I went these signs reminded me of the haunting war.

When I think of war I usually think of death, famine and all the rest of dread it causes. It reminds me of the picture I have seen of dead people with shattered buildings in the background It reminds me of people going crazy with fear and torture.

Sometimes I could just about imagine seeing people blown to bits by the pictures and stories I come in contact with when I think of war. This way I feel like shouting to H--- with the war!"