

The Stepping Stones of Our Life

Many of us are dissatisfied with our life in this community, but we shouldn't be very dismayed. All great men of yesterday were dissatisfied at one time or other, but they had ambition. Ambition to overcome these obstacles. The ambition of these men did not come to them ready-made. They learned it by being dissatisfied. We will never know how much we appreciate things unless we are dissatisfied.

Some of us here within this camp admit that we are getting lazy. But we were not born lazy, not any more than the people of other races or nationalities. Laziness is just another way of saying that we are on our way to become nobody. We must endeavor wholeheartedly to become somebody that can and will overcome the fact of being dissatisfied.

Since we are now being confined within the fences spending our life in this camp, most of us say, "It hain't the diff anyway, this is camp." And most of us do not have ambition to do anything. The students should be studying all the harder because of the present controversy. Let's get ambition so that we never can carry on where our parents left off prior to evacuation.

Our life is somewhat like climbing a mountain. We cannot climb the mountain just by gazing at it from the distance. We must go there and climb it considering the immediate problems that may confront us. As life goes, we must face each problem and gain whatever wisdom and knowledge we can.

So let us face the problems of life boldly for these are the stepping stones of our life. The confinement in a camp is just one of these stones that we have to step on in order to cross the stream of life. We should not worry about the past for yesterday is now only a dream. Tomorrow may behold much happiness and joy; yet it may be filled with sadness and dreariness. But whatever it may hold for us, face the problems as they come and make the best of it under all circumstances.

Julius Drumata Care "

Dec. 13, 1943