THINGS NEEDED ON TRAIN LISTED

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here notes from YASHEE WALKER, special NCA correspondent, who left last Sunday with the first contingent, were received this morning and we are passing them on to you in hope that they will be of some help to you in preparing for the trip.

Tuesday, August 11

 After Salt Lake City, we went to Ogden. Arrived there by 8:50 Monday night left Ogden at 8:20.
 Then across border to Evanston. Then these towns in order named: Green River, Rock Springs, Rawlins, Medicine Bow, Rock River, Laramie and Cheyenne.
 Arrived Cheyenne about 9 Tuesday morning. Changed engine and took off two diners and took on one.
 Left Cheyenne about 10:50 and have been riding towards Casper. Arrived Casper about 4:30. We were allowed to walk around for third time.

It is now 7:45 and just pulled into a small town called Bonneville.

As close as the guys on the train can figure out we should arrive in our camp about 11 p.m. tomorrow.

THINGS NEEDED ON TRAIN:
 Two towels, soap, tooth brush, blanket, something warm for night, and something cool for day.

Need at least one change of clothes, because clothes get very dirty. These are essential things.

Here are some others:
 Pillow, something to keep your mind occupied like cards, games, knitting, another towel.

Don't bring too much hand luggage and wear something comfortable.

 Girls--slacks; taboo on white shirts. Korchief for hair.

Boys--Something cool and comfortable, but not too good.

Bring all stamps and paper needed.

Scenery for entire trip has been desert country. Best scenery is just before Laramie and Cheyenne.

Be sure to close all windows going through tunnels.

Don't know where I'll be able to mail this, but I hope soon.

Now, 8:05. Latest word is that we arrive between 12 & 1:00 a.m. This sounds a little more authentic.

We are going to go direct to camp instead of sleeping over night en route as originally planned.

Coming to tunnel soon, so will close.
