"The occupation forces are happy in Japan," Scott said on a recent business trip to Seattle. "They're living more cheaply and more grandly than they've ever lived in their lives. Household help doesn't cost much. The wives have maids and have nothing do but sit around all day."

"No one is crying about having to stay in Japan," he said. "They've found some of the best homes with magnificient gardens, at small rentals, and are having a wonderful time."

The shipping man stated that both military and civilian personnel are aware they'll be transferred after signing of the peace with Japan, but meanwhile they're pleased. Many hope they'll find some way to stay.

There's no telling when that peace will be." Scott said. "Just as a guess. I'd say it won't be for two years. If General MacArthur had his way. I think it would be tomorrow. The plan has been worked out pretty well in detail but the United States must be sure Japan doesn't rearm."

Scott related that he was impressed with the huge quantities of food being sent to Americans in Japan, and some transshipped to Korea. Although the American personnel in Japan are living in ease, the Japanese are facing life grimly. Scott pointed out.

The Japanese merchants who formerly held executive posts have been purged from their jobs and their companies broken up, and they're really having a tough time. [Men I'd mee seen wearing striped trousers, living on the top of the world, are shabby now," Scott emphasized.

Scott, whose headquarters are in San Francisco, made his first trip to Japan in 1905. There were no automobiles, but the nation teemed with jinrickshas. Today there are numerous automobiles, and 'rickshas almost are a curiosity.

In ruling in favor of the alien Mexican, the high court reminded the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which had sought Delgadillo's deportation under terms of the 1917 Immigration Law that such an attempt was made on a "capricious application" of the statutes and that "respect for law does not thrive on captious interpretations.

Fight Tuberculosis with Christmas Seals

Your holiday mail brings you Christmas Seals bearing a red double-barred cross right here in Seattle and King County.

A Danish postal clerk thought of the idea of a seal to raise funds for health. Worrying about some sick children as he busily stamped letters, he thought, "If everyone would buy an extra stamp for each letter, we could build a hospital." King Christan approved the idea, and thousands of health stamps were bought in Copenhagen in 1904. That was the first Christmas Seal Sale.

The idea soon spread to other countries. A letter bearing a health seal reached Jacob Riis in America. He was so impressed with the idea that he wrote a story about it for the Outlook in 1907.

Emily Bissell of Wilmington, Delaware, distressed over lack of funds for tuberculosis work, took hope from the story and designed America's first Christmas Seal. The printer agreed to wait for his money. The postmaster helped her set up a table. But sales lagged.

Refusing to give up, Miss Bissell went to the Philadelphia North American.

"Greatest human interest story of 1907!" exclaimed Editor E. A.VanValkenburg. And the newspaper "put over" the first Christmas Seal Sale in America.

In Atlantic City in 1904, doctors and laymen organized the National Tuberculosis Association to study tuberculosis and to inform the public about the disease.

In Seattle, the Anti-Tuberculosis League of King County was founded in 1909.

Now in every state in the Union and many foreign countries, Christmas Seals are sold to finance the work of the local, state and national associations. Many gains have been made. The death rate has been pushed back from first to seventh. But tuberculosis still claims more lives between the ages of 15 and 44 than any other dis-

When you buy Christmas Seals, you carry on the hard fight, the good fight against tuberculosis. When you use Christmas Seals, you spread a message of health, hope and goodwill to mankind.

The Sporting Thing

Tokuda Drug Cagers May Do It

Boasting what appears on paper to be the finest collection of present-day Nisei cagers in this area, Tokuda Drug is out to get the City "B" league championship this season.

Last season, Tokuda's walked off with the local Class A title and the Northwest Times' first annual Northwest Invitational Basketball Tournament diadem. And they turned those tricks without Manabu Fujino of South End Merchants, Isao Nishimura of Lotus Troys and "Bullfrog" Suzuki whom they have since obtained. Fujino, Nishimura and Suzuki form a fearsome scoring trio.

Take those three and mix them up with the Tokuda regulars of last season.. Tokuda's strength was chiefly supplied by Chuck Kinoshita, Shobo Fujii and George Nakagawa. And then there are Yuk Takeuchi and Tak Yagi, both of whom are coming along in splendid fashion this fall, and Saibo Fujii and Hod Otani.

No matter what anyone says, don't kid yourself; Tokuda Drug has a representative Nisei basketball outfit which should do well in the City Loop. The boys may come home with the crown; they have championship material.

Sideline Topics

... everybody is in the dark: Who are the Sakuras in the NVC B basketball league?...the latest talk is that Greenhouse "A" will import a couple of more cage aces, including Rupert Arai, from the Oregon-Idaho area...last Sunday's reddest face and all that: a Tacoma youth streaked swiftly towards the basket, sank a neat hook shot, and nonchalantly returned to his position only to learn that his basket counted two points not for his team but for the opposing Lotus Lancers... because there are too many expert and successful "guest-guessers", among them Japanese Americans, a local metropolitan sheet now is asking the boys and the girls to select winners of games between teams one hardly recognizes ...

All-Oriental Cage Tournament Tips

... the all-Hawaii Nisei All-Stars will probably fly from Honolulu to Frisco and head north on a Greyhound bus, arriving here about a week before the tourney, and they may wear some jackets to publicize the "Hawaii, 49th State' slogan... if the Chicago Huskies accept the NVC's cool $ guarantee, Seattle will be seeing one of the most colorful Nisei teams in the country; the beautiful thing about it is that the Chicagoites are paced by a couple of former Seattleites, namely brilliant-shooting Johnny Okamoto and lanky Tak Hiyama ... the Fay Wah club of Fresno was the first Chinese outfit to say "yes" to the tournament officials...it would be to one's advantage to buy reserved tickets; two and a half bucks to see all the games in the three-day meet is a good proposition any way one looks at it...

Now from here on to chapter thirteen, the story is filled with suspects and suspicious actions from the different characters in the tale.

Potential Subjects

Ezra Jones has a nephew who loses a few thousand gees in the fine art of tossing the bones. He is a potential suspect because he is embarassed financially and is waiting anxiously for his rich uncle to knock off. Naturally, when old Ezra gets bounced on the bean is not feeling altogether sorrowful, at the loss.

Then there's Ezra's niece, a cute chicken indeed. She loves the sight of parties and new clothes, as a matter of fact anything that ducats can buy. She too is shy of the do-ray-me, so you can see she

Seattle Awaits Mrs. Vining

Every Seattle citizen who longs for a peaceful Pacific banked by a democratic American mainland and an Americanized Japanese group of islands will be anticipating the arrival of Mrs. Elizabeth Vining of Philadelphia to this city.

Mrs. Vining, tutor of Crown Prince Akihito of Japan, will be welcomed here by the local Japanese community at a banquet next Friday, Nov. 21, in the Frye hotel. After the banquet, she will address a public meeting in the First Methodist church, Fifth and Marion, on the subject, "Young People in New Japan,"

The banquet will be sponsored by the Japanese Relief Committee of the Northwest, and the meeting by the American Friends Service Committee and Friends Center which recently were awarded the 1947 Nobel peace prize. The latter affair will be to raise funds for Quaker relief work in Japan.

The fact that Mrs. Vining belongs to the Quaker religion is a pleasant indication that the young Japanese prince is in the comforting hands of a woman who violently opposes war in any form.

And because Mrs. .Vining is the tutor of the Japanese prince, who, speaking generally, will be regarded as the leader of Japan's young people, her talk should be worth hearing.
