

4. "Mosier" Lake

Ca. 1927

This is what the Yasui kids called this lake. There are many, many large and small lakes like this along the railroad tracks that follow the Columbia River, and most of them have no name.

This shows an extreme example of how some of the Oak Grove Nikkei chose to cross the lake to get to the picnic grounds, which were slightly back of the top of the bluffs seen here.