

Mrs. Lumsden was the wife of a prominent Dentist in Beverly Hills. She arrived on First Street in Japan Town in search of a new maid. After interviewing Hisa and learning of her experience in the Mess Hall and Hospital, she hired her. One of the first things Hisa remembers after being hired, was being asked to surrender her sugar stamp to her new employer. Sugar was one of the many items being rationed at the time so it was a valuable item to a household. Hisa would be expected to clean house, do the laundry, provide child care and do the cooking for The Lumsden's and their son Robert (Billy) and serve at the many social events the couple hosted. Mrs. Lumsden would often show Hisa how to prepare a dish and eventually would give her the cookbook and Hisa would prepare and serve for the family and their friends. Hisa had Thursdays off, at which time she and her girlfriend Yoshiko, would go to Japan Town for shopping and to see the sights. Her room was provided to her, plus meals and a uniform along with a salary. Hisa doesn't remember how much it was, but she managed to get along and save a little. Since Dr. Lumsden's office was in Hollywood, he often invited "famous people" to his home for social occasions. Hisa especially enjoyed those times. George Raft, Actor and Leading Man of the Day, was one of Dr. Lumsden's patients and guests. Hisa says it was fun to see how even though these people were famous they are also just people who like to have fun with their friends. Hisa says The Lumsden Family was very good to her. She especially enjoyed going with them when they went to their mountain cabin out of Los Angeles. They'd roast a hen or turkey and have a great time. Hisa worked for the Lumsden's until 1948 when she left Beverly Hills to go back to marry her Sumito.

Mrs. Lumsden was the wife of a prominent Dentist in Beverly Hills. She arrived on First Street in Japan Town in 1914. After interviewing Hisa and learning of her skills in the Hall and Hospital, she hired her. One of the things she remembers after being hired, was being asked to put a stamp to her new employer. Sugar was on rationed at the time so it was a valuable item. Hisa would be expected to clean house, do the laundry, and do the cooking for The Lumsden's and to entertain and serve at the many social events the couple would often show Hisa how to prepare a dish. He would give her the cookbook and Hisa would prepare it for the family and their friends. Hisa had Thursdays off and her girlfriend Yoshiko, would go to Japan on the ship to see the sights. Her room was provided to her. She had a uniform along with a salary. Hisa doesn't remember the name, but she managed to get along and save money. Lumsden's office was in Hollywood, he often took her to his home for social occasions. Hisa especially enjoyed those times. George Raft, Actor and Leading Man of the Day, was one of Dr. Lumsden's patients and guests. Hisa says it was fun to see how even though these people were famous they are also just people who like to have fun with their friends. Hisa says The Lumsden Family was very good to her. She especially enjoyed going with them when they went to their mountain cabin out of Los Angeles. They'd roast a hen or turkey and have a great time. Hisa worked for the Lumsden's until 1948 when she left Beverly Hills to go back to marry her Sumito.

I wish that all YOUR birthday wishes come true!

Love,

Mrs Lumsden

19 B 11
Aisle Row Seat
RESERVED
Sonja Henie Ice Palace
GOOD ONLY
THURS. EVE.
FEBRUARY 21 1946
DILLINGHAM PTG. CO., INC., L.A.

Some a la carte items . . . Breakfast in Hollywood

- 1 "My mother loves me!" says Tom Breneman. But the greatest mail response in radio (more than one thousand letters every day) prove that women from coast to coast love this genial Hollywood host and his whacky antics.
- 2 Tom's fans line up early every morning in front of his neon and glass-brick restaurant on Hollywood's Vine Street to see and hear his famous breakfast broadcast.
- 3 Every table is filled when "Breakfast in Hollywood" goes on the air. Microphone in hand, Tom wanders among the tables beneath the palm trees, interviewing his guests.
- 4 Tom and Hedda Hopper, as seen in the motion picture, "Breakfast in Hollywood." Tom's studying Hedda's hat with the eyes of an expert. Radio listeners send Tom hundreds of goofy hats every week.

