DEDICATION

*To the high ideals beyond,
To greater realms above,
We dedicate sincerely
This messenger of love.
To success in work and duty
Though great the odds may be;
To honesty and fairness,
To play and industry.
To the heights of joy and humor,
To the gods of work and fate;
To the Crimson banner o'er us
This book we dedicate. To*

Schoolmates and teachers
Friends and acquaintances,
All you who've met us
And know of our aims,
Give your attention
To those who request it,
Someday you may need us
At work or in games.
You'll know we are ready
To render you service;
To offer you counsel
Concerning Life's ways.
We've felt the hard knocks
But we've struggled above them
So learn from example
It's service that pays.
'Tis helping our classmates
When they are in trouble
And pulling them through
That pleases us most.
So learn from high seniors
Who excel you in wisdom
It's the aid you have given
Of which you may boast.

SMITH-HUGHES SHOP

CLASS instruction and industrial training are the elements prevailing among the Smith-Hughes students.

Students work one week and receive class instruction for the next, under the industrial coöperation plan.

During the past year, the Smith-Hughes cabinet shop, under the direction of Mr. R. C. Hornberger, filled orders from the Oakland School department. One hundred and twenty oak-topped drawing tables helped keep the boys busy when they were not working on thirty-six model drawing stands, which were completed this term. Boys in cabinet shop also constructed an auto lift for the auto shop, making it possible for students in the latter department to overhaul the intricate mechanism which lies hidden beneath the body of the car.

Singular among the many achievements was a phonograph cabinet of futuristic design, devised by Mr. Alfred Mueller.

An air compressor, spraying paint at the rate and capacity of three average men workers, was constructed by Jim Mathews, in the Smith-Hughes auto shop. Instructed by Mr. R. W. Bennett, Kenneth Aymar constructed a nine-cylinder model airplane motor.

Approximately fifty or sixty machines are overhauled and repaired during the term in the auto shop, which works under the supervision of Mr. R. W. Bennett. Two boys are assigned each job, and in this way are kept in rotation as to the nature of the assignment.

Outstanding in work done during the past year was the complete overhauling of two late model cars. Work done in the shop is graded higher than that done at the majority of garages, while only the parts of the machine which are required to repair the break are paid for by the owner of the car.

Repairing of vacuum cleaners, radios, radio batteries, battery eliminators, battery chargers, and automobile starters comprised the majority of the work accomplished by the electrical department of the Smith-Hughes shops.

A three-colored sign, used as a means of advertisement, and spelling "ROOSEVELT," was formulated by this department also.

Wiring and construction of the water fountain used at several of the school social affairs, was managed entirely by the boys from this section.

Very high-class radio sets, of both the receiving and transmitting types, have been made as special projects. Besides making "B" eliminators from the established designs, the boys devised their own plans. Part of their successful achievements lies in the magnet charger, made for Oakland high schools.

ROOSEVELT ORCHESTRA

THE Roosevelt orchestra has gained much renown because of its remarkable method of showing adaptability to circumstances, and also because of the successful way in which its leader, Mr. A. C. Olker, has prompted it to present its numerous productions. During the fall term of 1928 the orchestra helped bring many affairs to a successful end. On November 8, selections were played to parents and friends of the students at the annual Open House night. Other occurrences at which the orchestra officiated include the Senior Assembly, Graduation Exercises, and at the presentation of several plays, namely, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," "The Exchange," and "Knave of Hearts," which were produced by the Hilltop Workshop.

The spring term of 1929 was eventful in the fact that the orchestra played for the annual Principals' Convention held in Oakland this year. Its next principal showing was at the "Bells of Capistrano," an operetta presented by the combined Glee club of Roosevelt High School, which club is also managed by Mr. Olker. As a regular event of each successive term the orchestra will play at the Graduation Exercises of the school.

The orchestra consists of sixty-two members: Alfred Amerio, Ralph Allen, Vincent Anderson, Fritz Arlberg, Harry Beddig, Frances Barney, Faye Boxley, Henry Begier, Bill Barr, Arthur Black, Ethel Christensen, Norman Chew, Easton Campbell, Herman Cook, Giles Cropsy, Sarah Davidson, James Dan, Robley Evans, Perry Evans, Francis Griffith, Rose Gross, Claude Griffith, John Goodwin, Vernon Goerner, Miriam Goldberg, Ernest Caine, Sidney Hoffenberg, Charlotte Hays, Frank Hocks, Hermonynia Ivy, George Johnson, Alma Kidd, Robert Kloppe, Milford Lundgren, Frank Muller, Harry Michell, Waldo MacDermott, Ernest McClelland, Fred Neuvohner, George Pestana, Vera Quint, Marie Rose, Ross Robinson, Ray Smith, Ivy Stahl, Ada Salter, Isabelle Solve, Roy Stout, William Sowersby, Eugene Slinky, Joe Sousa, William Salter, Lorena Seward, George Scriven, Olga Tegnir, Ben Thomas, Simon Velasquez, Nat Velasquez, Jim Woodside, Lorena Wright, Hildegard Zepka, George Youhill.

HILLTOP WORKSHOP

OPENING their active term, the fall of 1928 Hilltop Workshop presented their initiation ceremonies early in the semester. Selections chosen from many well-known classical plays were given by the members of the two workshops.

Louise Saunders' fantastic comedy, "The Knave of Hearts," was the feature entertainment of Open House Night and was presented by girls of the Hilltop Workshop. A pre-showing of this play was given to the Roosevelt student body at an assembly on November 7.

The united Workshop made a trip to San Francisco Chinatown and enjoyed a Chinese dinner, which was followed by a visit to a Chinese theater.

"The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," by Anatole France, and "The Exchange," by Althea Thurston, were projects which were presented to an audience in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School on the evening of October 12.

The concluding presentation of the term was the third annual Christmas Pageant, "The Evergreen Tree," by Percy MacKaye.

Two parties given by Miss Marietta Voorhees, director of the Workshop, at her picturesque home, culminated this very eventful term.

The most important feature of the spring 1929 Hilltop Workshop's accomplishments was the all-city pageant, "Sherwood," by Alfred Noyes. This stupendous production was participated in by all the dramatic workshops of the Oakland public high schools. It was staged in the Oakland High School auditorium. The play was presented at three different times because of the large demand for tickets for the affair. Two of the productions were given for public benefit, while the third was solely for the principals of the Oakland high schools during their convention week.

Under the direction of Miss Voorhees, the Hilltop Workshop presented their initiation ceremony on the evening of April 19.

Following the set tradition, the dramatic students visited San Francisco Chinatown, featuring the Chinese restaurant and theater.

"Abraham Lincoln," by John Drinkwater, was presented to the Roosevelt student body on February 11, in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday occurred on the following day.

Louise Saunders' fantasy, "Figureheads," and another play, "The Other One," by Arthur Kitchun, were the concluding presentations of the term.

The last gathering of the Hilltop Workshop was made socially at the home of Miss Marietta Voorhees, and closed the dramatics activities for the spring term of 1929.

AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

ON Open House night, November 8, 1928, Roosevelt donned a festive air and heralded to the world that on that night her doors would swing open in welcome to visitors. For this occasion, girls of the Hilltop Workshop presented the dramatization of the far-famed legend, "The Knave of Hearts." Gayety of the futuristic scenery prepared by Miss Jaunita Nicholson's stage-craft pupils, and selections by the orchestra, directed by Mr. A. C. Olker, helped transport the audience to the "land of make-believe."

Class exhibits followed the presentation of the play. Displays ranged from lively basketball games, sponsored by the boys' physical education department, to the beauty parlor operated by Miss Hiner's chemistry classes. In spite of the fact that Clara Musswitz, acting beauty specialist, was able to make fair damsels fairer, she expresses no desire to become professional.

Not magicians, as it would seem, but two of our own boys—Sidney Smith and Vaughn Ferguson—crumbled tin cans with apparent ease. Aspirants for such dexterity may sign up in Miss Mabel Akers' physics class and there learn how to manipulate the instruments used in the process.

Behind a miniature stage, Donald Sea and James Clancy operated their puppets to enact Harriet Beecher Stowe's story of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

If girls of the physical education department, who demonstrated the uses of first aid, waited to apply their skill to victims of the boys' cooking room, they waited in vain, for the exhibits of the latter department, as well as those of all others, were conducted excellently.

An original, yet practical, display was featured in the mathematics center. An engineer's transit, in perfect condition, was demonstrated by Maud Price, an advanced mathematics student. Beautiful examples of geometry in art and industry, in the form of blankets, rugs, and tapestries, were exposed ostentatiously around the walls and upon the floor of the room. Many special topics covered by students of the mathematics classes were placed around the room. Projects were based upon subjects pertaining to the use of geometry and theory in the every-day world.

Members of the Honor Society were stationed as ushers and directors for the event.

SOCIAL STUDIES CLUB

THE Social Studies Club, under the supervision of Mr. Eugene Hilton, carried off high honors the last two terms as an active club.

Divided into three sections, each section has a special object toward which it was working.

The Amusement section, with Miss Kathleen Sheridan as advisor and Harry Peck as chairman, provided entertainment for meetings and parties for the fall term. The chairman of the Amusement section this spring semester was George Gilly.

Miss Bessie Keller acted as advisor of the Service section, with Kenneth Holloway as chairman for the fall semester, and Etta Livermore this spring semester.

Howard Boyd acted as chairman of the Legislative group the first semester, with Mr. Eugene Hilton as advisor. This term Marion Sandquist was chairman. The purpose of this group was to discuss and study parliamentary procedure.

The three sections met separately once every month and met together once every month. This was known as a combined meeting, at which all important business and plans were discussed. Programs were presented by the Amusement section.

One of the biggest blocks of work done last semester by the club was the making of a large file. This file was made by boys of the wood shop, under the direction of Mr. R. C. Hornberger.

The entire expense of the file was covered by the club.

During the spring semester a trip to the immigration station at Angel Island was made, and a picture given in the Little Theatre formed part of the social side of their calendar.

R. O. T. C.

THE fall term of 1928 started smoothly enough as far as the R. O. T. C. was concerned. About 150 cadets were enrolled, thirty of whom were recruits. Seven officers from the previous term returned. Although there was no way to demonstrate their proficiency in actual competition, the Roosevelt unit received several favorable comments as to their skill and ability in their art.

The unit also progressed in athletics. They capped their activities for the term by taking the championship of Interclass Basketball. The team, led by Bill Murray, played throughout the season, losing only to the L-12 class team.

The army quintet was coached by Sergeant Max Moore. Players of the first string team consisted of Bill Murray, center and captain; George Metz and Clair Nelson, forwards; and Henry DeKat and John Thomas filling the guard positions.

From the team, three men—Bill Murray, Clair Nelson, and Henry DeKat—were selected to fill positions on the mythical all-city team.

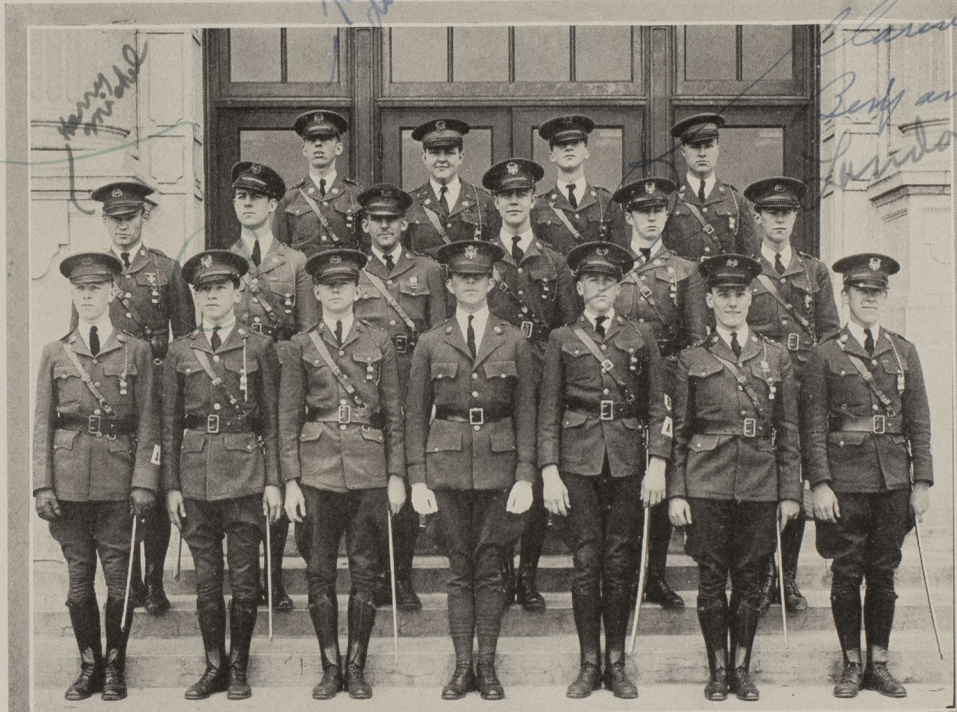

One hundred and sixty cadets, including thirty-five recruits, were enrolled at the commencement of the spring term of 1929. With a staff of eleven officers and a large number of cadets returning from the fall term, work was started immediately and was soon in full sway under practiced leaders.

The annual inspection of Oakland units was conducted on March 20 with Major E. Waddell as the inspecting officer.

The spring riding class for cadets from all Oakland schools started April 13, with expert army horsemen acting as instructors for this group. Work in the group progressed rapidly. Captain Nickerson, a U. S. Army officer, had complete charge of the class. The consent of the parents of each student was required, as accidents are not impossible occurrences considering some of the novices who participated.

At a recent meeting of the principals of the junior high schools of Oakland, the request of Colonel C. G. Lawrence to have representatives of the R. O. T. C. speak before junior high school boys was granted. As a result, Sergeant Max Moore and Cadet Colonel Prentice Sawtelle have spoken to the boys of Alexander Hamilton in an attempt to give them an idea of what the R. O. T. C. does and to arouse interest among the boys who may desire to join the unit upon their entrance to high school.

To the tune of two out of three first places, the Roosevelt R. O. T. C. unit again proved to the other high school units that it excelled them at their game. Under the leadership of Captain George Gilly the unit simply overwhelmed the audience with the manner in which they exhibited their skill. Since Max Moore has been with the unit Roosevelt has not lost a competition for three years. Roosevelt band also came through with first place, led by Lieutenant Landon Rice, drum major. The Roosevelt student body is extremely proud of the manner in which its unit has distinguished itself as the supreme unit of the Oakland R. O. T. C.

YELL LEADERS

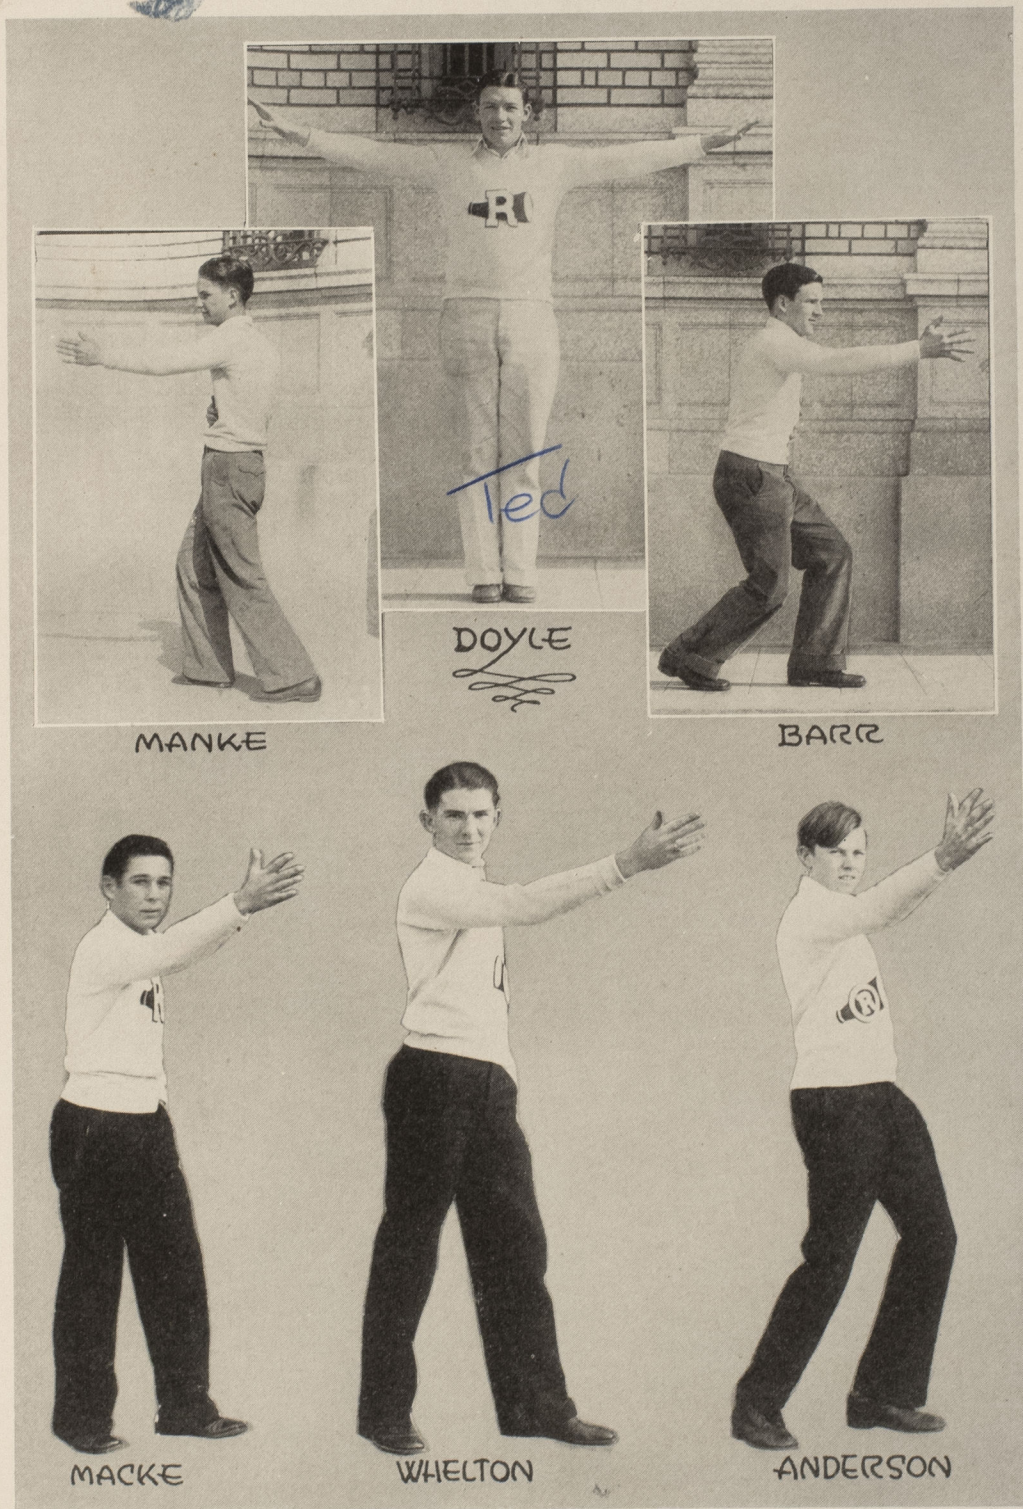

The fall term found Louis Macke in the rôle of Varsity yell leader for his second successive term. Macke had all the essential qualities of a first-class yell leader; namely, pep, ability, and a good head. It was Louie's fine work in this office that led the student body to nominate him for the presidency for the spring term of 1929.

Herbert Anderson and Jerome Whelton, because of their outstanding ability, discovered in Mr. E. D. Doxsee's yell leading class, were appointed by Macke as his assistants.

Ted Doyle, always a leader at Roosevelt, was elected to carry on the duties of yell leader for the spring term. A year ago Ted was an assistant to Macke. Doyle's ability and fine personality led the students to promote him to this office.

Doyle picked as his assistants Bill Barr and Harold Manke, both of whom are well known and well liked by the students of Roosevelt.

PRACTICE FOOTBALL

Roosevelt's practice season was a success, one win and two ties.

Piedmont held the Roughriders to a 6-to-6 tie. The powerful St. Mary's grid team was held to a 0-to-0 score. Roosevelt succeeded in whipping the Alameda eleven 7 to 6.

O. A. L. FOOTBALL

ROUGHRIDERS RIDDEN BY REDSKINS

The Roughriders scored early in the first quarter, but that was all. The fighting warriors came back and played a wonderful game. The score does not show the stubborn fight furnished by the Teddies. The game ended with Roosevelt on the Redmen one-yard line.

TIGERS, TEDDIES TIE

The Redshirts were within scoring distance throughout the first half, but lacked the necessary punch to push it over. Fremont came back in the second half with blood in their eye. They furnished the Teddies with some real scores. The result was a 0-to-0 tie.

WILDCATS WILT

The Oakland Acorns, supposedly weak, put a great fight. Had their drop kick not fallen short in the third quarter, they would have upset the Redshirts. It was one of Roosevelt's off days, but we pulled through, 7 to 6.

TEDDIES TACKLE A TOUGH TASK

Entering the game as underdogs, the Roughriders battled desperately for four quarters, losing a heartbreaking game, 7 to 14. It was a tie score with three minutes to go. Colman barely snagged a long pass and rolled over the goal.

COWBOYS CONQUER CUBS

Thirty-one to 0 was the score turned in at the finish of the Roughrider-Cub contest. Coach Elwood Allison's protégés tried hard, but of no avail. The Redshirts were on the warpath and took the game with no trouble.

PRESIDENTS PUNISH PIRATES

The Roughriders climaxed the season in great style, overpowering the San Leandro Pirates 46 to 0. Practically every man on the Roosevelt squad saw action. It was a happy bunch of boys in the shower room.

BASKETBALL

THE 1929 season saw the inauguration of a new system in the O. A. L. basketball schedule.

The schools were divided into two sections. High schools east of the lake formed one division, while those on the west side formed the second. Practice games were played between the east and west sides.

Teams east of the lake played for the championship of their division, while the west-lake boys competed for honors on their side.

Champs of both divisions then met each other in a three-game series for the championship of the O. A. L.

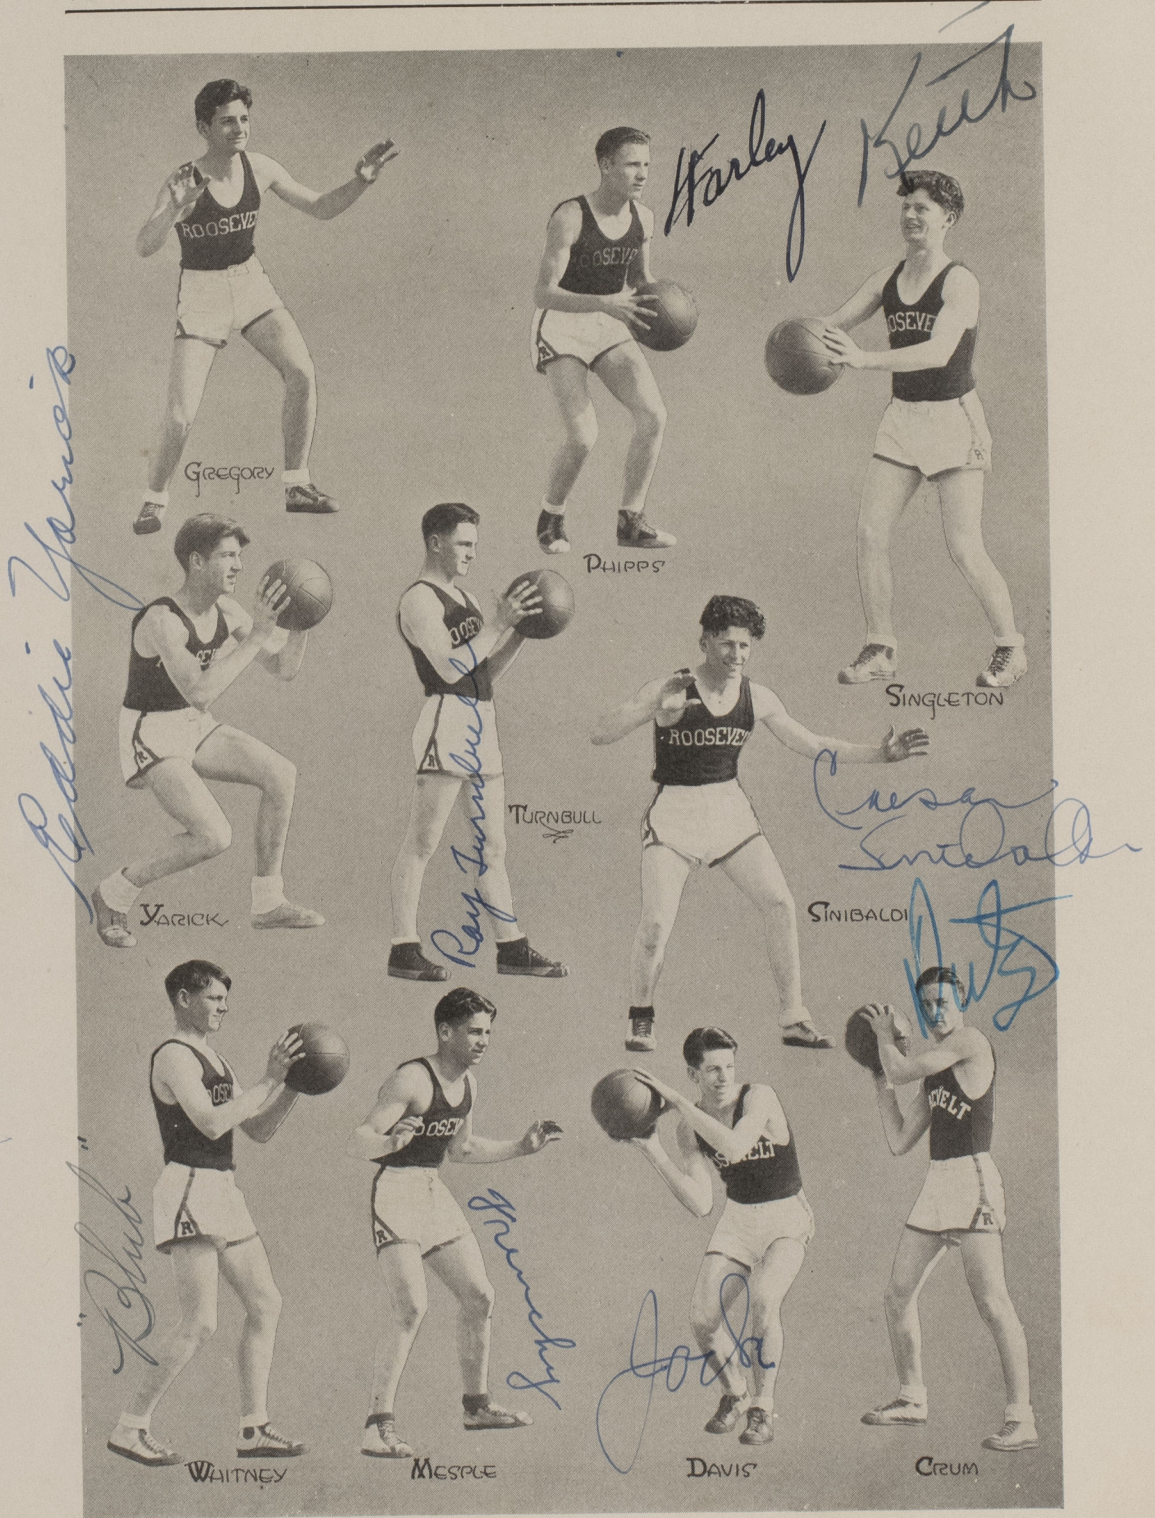

Roosevelt copped the east-lake championship, while Tech won the laurels on the west side.

The two teams met in the Oakland Auditorium to decide whether Roosevelt would keep the cup or Tech would be holder of it.

The Technites succeeded in trouncing the Cowboys in the first game by a 16 to 30 count.

The Redshirts came back in the second game with only one purpose, to win. Roosevelt led the scoring for the whole game with the exception of the last minute when Stromgren sank a bucket, the game ending in a tie, 16 to 16.

In the extra period, a foul was called on Roosevelt. Capt. George Mathewson, of Tech dropped it in to take the game and the championship 17 to 16.

ROOSEVELT succeeded in copping a third place in this year's pennant race, McClymonds taking first and Tech second. The boys started out as if they were headed for the championship, but a few slips cooked their goose.

The squad battle each team in the O. A. L. twice, winning seven games and dropping five. Coach Tommy Fitzpatrick is never satisfied with a third place, but, said Tommy, "It's better than a fourth."

At the time the all-city team was picked, the Lariat had gone to press. The team appearing in the book was picked by Coach Fitzpatrick.

Caesar Sinibaldi proved a great success in wrecking the pitchers' chucking average. He led the lineup with an average of .600. Pete Vierra, Freddy Brain, Frenchy Mesple and Jimmy Tobin were all close on his heels.

The boys receiving starts in the sport are: "Blub" Whitney, Al Lamar, Pete Vierra, "Frenchy" Mesple, Caesar Sinibaldi, and Freddy Brain. Those who are earning their letters are: Harry Aho, Jimmy Tobin, John Thomas, Gene Haudbine, George Kyer and Francis Marra.

The team was managed by Johnny Fried. Craig Chase acted as his assistant.

UNI UNSUCCESSFUL

The Cowboys succeeded in taking the Cubs down the line twice, the last time by a 10-to-2 count. The Grove Street boys proved too slow for the Roughriders.

TEDDIES TAKE A TUMBLE

McClymonds took the first contest, in three extra innings, 2 to 1. The second game was presented to McClymonds after Roosevelt had made four errors, to score as many runs.

FREMONT FURNISHES FIGHT

The Cowboys galloped to two victories at the expense of Fremont. The scores, 1 to 4, and 2 to 3, show that the Tigers were not easy to conquer.

WILDCATS WIN WUN

The big surprise of the season was when Oakland High boys succeeded in trouncing the Roughriders 2-1. Roosevelt took the first contest with an easy victory.

TECH TAKES TWO

The Bulldogs proved too much for the Roughriders and succeeded in downing Roosevelt twice, once by a 5-to-4 count and once to the tune of 10 to 1.

PIRATES PRUNED

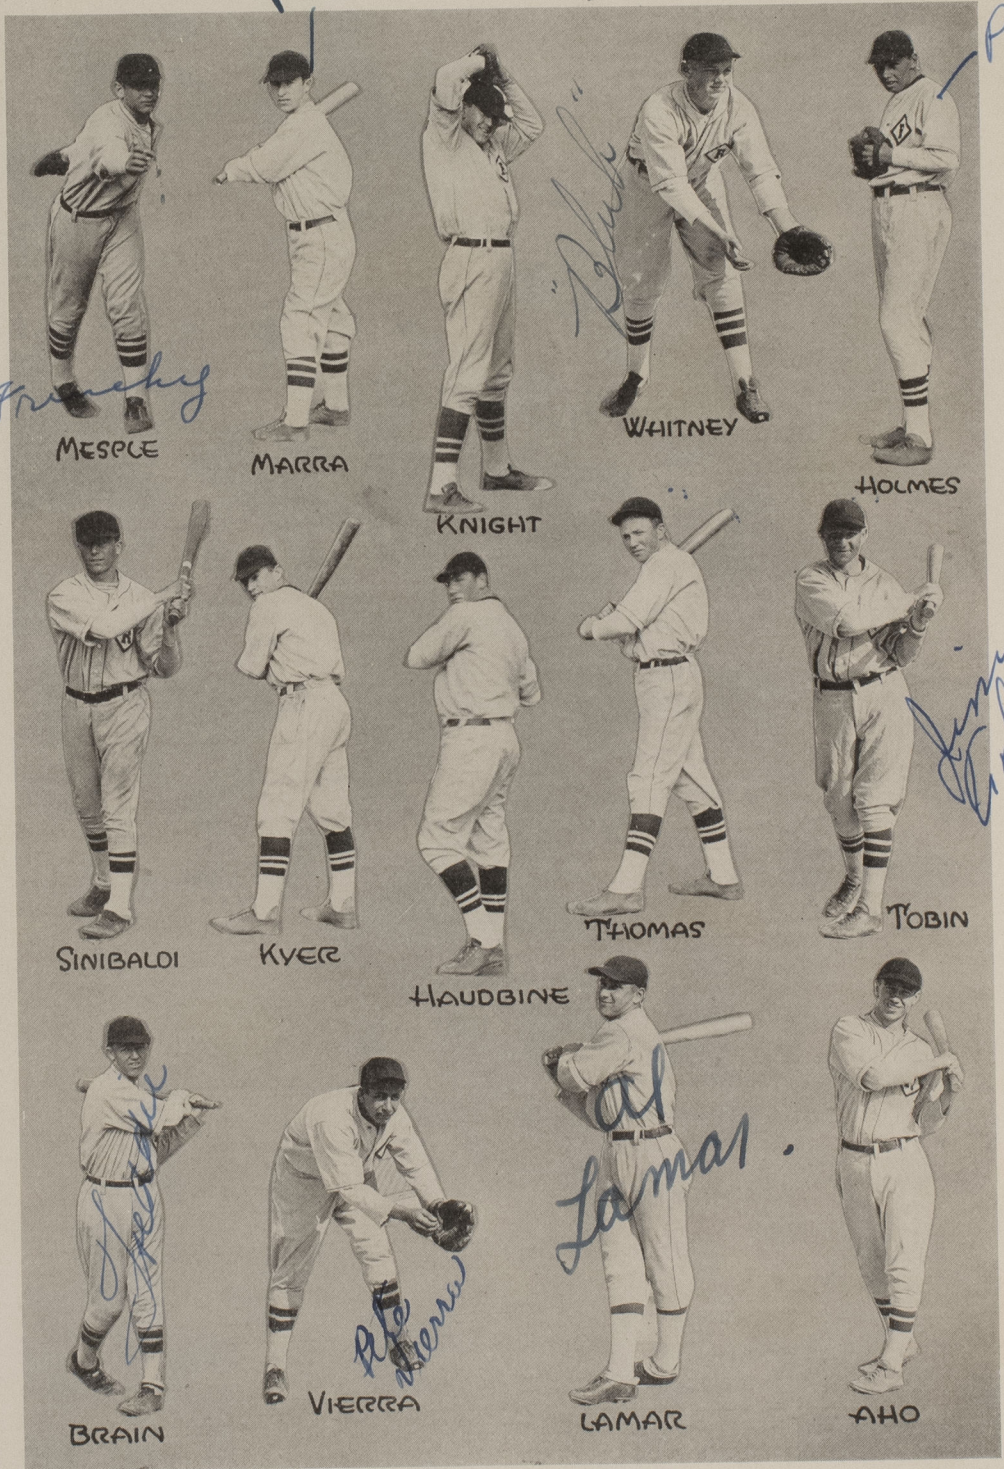

The Redshirts climaxed the season by taking two games from San Leandro. The last one finished with the close score of 2 to 1.

MINOR SPORTS

"A sport for every boy" was the slogan adopted by the coaches, which resulted in golf, boxing, wrestling, tumbling, soccer, and tennis teams, or clubs, being formed.

These minor sports created a great deal of interest in some boys who had never previously turned out for athletics. The coaches plan to carry these phases of minor sports as long as the boys show interest.

Boxing was probably the most popular sport in this group, with tennis and soccer coming next. As a whole, these sports contributed a great deal of pleasure to the boys.

TRACK

FROM fifth place to second place, in four years, is the record made by Roosevelt's track teams. Coach La Verne Brinkman is well satisfied with the showing made by his charges in the 1929 meet held at U. C.

The new system involving nearly twice as many men was the feature of the event. The present regulations call for four heats in each event, heats being classified according to the athlete's ability.

This is Coach Brinkman's first track season at Roosevelt. Considering his success the past season, the Redshirts should come out at the top of the ladder.

Twenty-three men, counting the manager, were presented with letters at the Block "R" assembly. Boys to receive the awards were: Davis, Crum, Bertotti, Farthingham, Dodd, Avelar, Kippel, Taylor, Rothschild, Langberg, Johnson, Harbison, Staack, Gilbert and Doyle. Boys receiving stars were: Captain Gudnason, Yarick, Miller, Moore, Stuart and Whitney.

Harold Gudnason, who placed in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes, captained the 1929 Teddy track team. Bill Young acted as senior manager for the track squad. Jack Merkly and William Salter were junior and sophomore managers, respectively.

The first practice encounter found the Roughriders up against Piedmont and Oakland.

TRACK

COACH BRINKMAN

The Highlanders copped the meet when the Cowboys dropped the relay, by one point.

The second meet, staged at Berkeley, found the Red-shirts with Berkeley, San Leandro and Richmond as their opponents. The boys did not look so good, and lost the meet by the large score of: Berkeley $73\frac{1}{2}$, Roosevelt $39\frac{1}{2}$, San Leandro $18\frac{1}{2}$ and Richmond $12\frac{1}{2}$. This was the first quadrangular meet of the season.

The Teddies again lost to Piedmont by a large score, on the latter's turf, due to poor condition from Easter vacation, having only two days to train. The scores were Piedmont $82\frac{1}{3}$ and $40\frac{2}{3}$.

After a week of intensive training the Cowboys emerged victorious over the Richmond "Tankers," taking nine out of a possible first places. The scores were Roosevelt $62\frac{1}{2}$ and Richmond $52\frac{1}{2}$.

With four Oakland high schools entered in a meet at Fremont, the Richmond tracksters won by defeating Roosevelt by 4 points. The meet was run off like a regular O. A. L. event to try out the new system. The final scores were: Richmond 40, Roosevelt 36, Oakland 30, University 15, and McClymonds 5.

The last quadrangular practice meet before the O. A. L. was held at the University of California oval. McClymonds won the events with $49\frac{1}{2}$ points, Roosevelt $45\frac{1}{2}$, Richmond $33\frac{3}{4}$, and University $21\frac{1}{4}$. This meet was run off like a regular O. A. L. track meet, having four heats to each event. This was the last practice meet for the Teddies before the O. A. L.

Roosevelt succeeded in placing second in the O. A. L. meet by rustling first place in the relay to beat out McClymonds by a one-half point margin. The Cowboys displayed neat form, taking their share of first places mostly in field events.

The scores of the annual event are as follows: Technical 273, Roosevelt 238, McClymonds 237, Fremont 170, University 159, San Leandro 111, and Oakland 61.

Second place, taken by Coach Brinkman's men, is the highest place that Roosevelt has ever taken in an O. A. L. meet.

The new regulations enabled twenty-two Roosevelt boys to earn blocks.

Below is the line-up entered by Roosevelt in the big meet:

Mile—Aymar, Rothschild, Langburg and Sinibaldi.

880-yd.—Avelar, Taylor, Klippel, and Yarick.

440-yd.—Bertotti, Jones, Dodd, and Mesple.

220-yd.—Crum, Davis, Gudnason, Thomas.

100-yd.—Gudnason, Crum, Davis, Farthingham.

120 High Hurdle—Doyle, Whitney, Stuart, Denend.

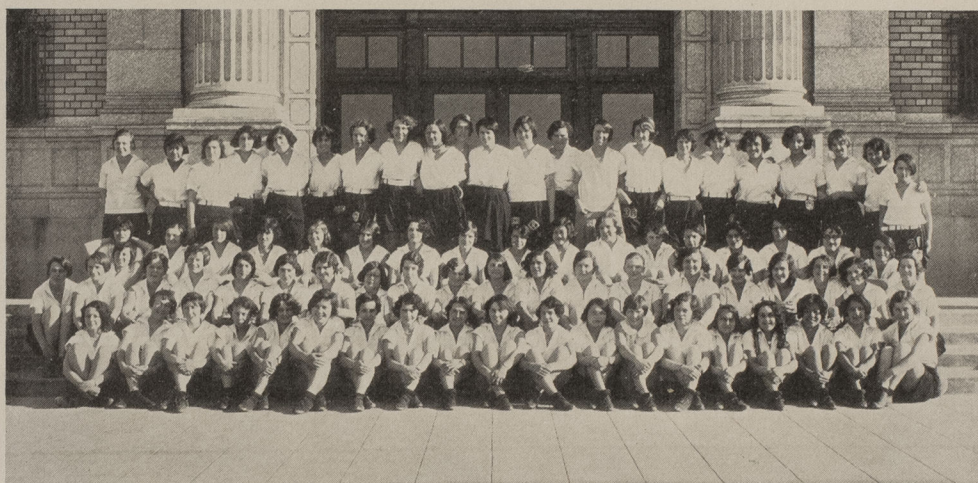

120 Low Hurdle—Doyle, Whitney, Stuart, Denend.

High Jump—Yarick, Johnson, Truebody, Sullivan.

Shot Put—Moore, Johnson, Patterson, Farthingham.

Broad Jump—Miller, Harbison, Macke, Keating.

Relay—Crum, Bertotti, Gudnason, Davis.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

UNDER the advisorship of Mrs. Lillian Schuette, the Girls' Athletic Association of Roosevelt has been carrying on work for the past two semesters. The fall officers were as follows: Izetta Ames, president; Helen Benson, vice-president; Christel Lehne, secretary; and Elisa Knops, treasurer. The first annual all-sports dinner was brought about by this cabinet. All awards for that year were given out by Mr. Jacobsen. Miss Virginia Currie, president of the U. C.'s W. A. A., was the guest of honor and main speaker. The G. A. A. federation of the East Bay made a universal constitution in the fall of 1928. Two representatives were there from each school. Roosevelt sent Elisa Knops and Helen Benson. The federation met at University High School in November. Roosevelt sent fifteen girls to attend it.

The spring semester's activities were conducted by Elisa Knops, president; Mary Harding, vice-president; Dora Lee, treasurer; and Agnes Olsen, secretary. This semester's association presented the third annual G.A.A. assembly. The main speaker was Miss Anna Frasier, president of the Woodrow Wilson Junior High School. The annual crew supper was held on May 21. Dora Lee took charge of this. The Lost and Found department was straightened out this term and all the clothes sent to the laundry. These are now ready for the use of any girl who needs them.

The aim of the club is to "give as many girls as possible a chance to participate in as many sports as possible." The ideal is "an all-around girl"—one who is not only good in athletics but in school work as well, a girl who is ready for service at home or at school.

In each graduating class the girl who reaches the closest to this ideal has her name written on a G.A.A. cup. The fall semester added the name of Lillian Francis to the list. The S. U. S. pin is awarded to the girl who has the best posture of any girl in the school. She may wear it for one semester. In the fall semester, the pin was worn by Anna Giambruno and in the spring by Mabel Campbell. Maude Garner will wear it next semester.

ARCHERY AND HORSESHOES

Archery and horseshoes, during the fall term, were managed by Willamina Katt. Miss Nessie Hobbs has charge of these minor sports.

Ethel Bradly is fall horseshoe champion, overcoming Evelyn Jones 11-7, 11-6. Edna Hardgrove proved her championship in archery by making a score of 86 points out of 30 points. Helen Spoon, last year's champion, outshot Edna 92 to 65 in a contest held between the two girls after the regular tournament.

HANDBALL

Alice Davila is school champion in handball singles. She beat Dot Ulisse, senior, 6-11, 6-11. Dot overcame Carl Glibert, H-11, while Alice, H-10, beat Mabel Campbell, L-11. All these girls are class champions.

In the doubles matches, Martin and Ernst, H-11, beat Ames and Olsen, 12, by 11-10, 11-9. Herrera and Trautman, L-11, played Bowen and De Gama, 10's. The latter won. When these two winners met, Martin and Ernst were given the title of school champions. Lillian Olsen was handball manager.

SENIOR HISTORY

I think of all the things at school
That fill our minds with work,
That history's the hardest as a rule,
With dates that we can't shirk.
And though I try all kinds of tricks,
There's only one that I can fix—

That's 1776

Columbus camped at Valley Forge
In 1776

In company with noble George
In 1776

But Wilhelm should have made his will
He licked those Huns at Bunker Hill,
I guess that they are going still,
In 1776

Miles Standish settled all the west
In 1776

And had John Alden do the rest
In 1776

Jack was nimble, he was quick—
I think he jumped the candlestick
In 1776

The Germans thought they'd start a war
In 1776

I can't see what they did that for
In 1776

'Cause General Pershing licked 'em good,
Along with dear old Robin Hood
In 1776

The Pilgrims came to 'Frisco Bay
In 1776

I guess they must have come to stay
In 1776

And right there's where they settled down
And on that very strip of ground
They helped make history good and sound
In 1776

AUSTRICH RAISING

"Hank, let's raise 'austriches'."

"Huh?" said I.

We'd been sitting before the fireplace in our cabin. Bill had been doing some deep thinking and I'd been wondering just what he was going to spring on me this time. Whenever Bill stares in the fire and twitches his ears like he does when he's excited, I know he's got some foolish idea which is going to get us both in trouble.

Bill has the biggest collection of foolish ideas of anyone you've ever heard about and I fall for every one of them. Yes, sir, against all my better judgment, whenever Bill suggests something, sooner or later he persuades me that he's got a corking idea which I'm lucky to get in on. Bill would make a wonderful salesman. He can talk anyone into anything.

Why, if he told the aldermen in our town that he was going to ride to the north star on horseback in search of a gold mine, they'd get their horses and tell him he was going to have company on the trip. And so would I.

"Bill," said I, "I've stuck by you when you was taking saxophone lessons, I stuck by you through smallpox and cloudbursts, and I didn't fail you when sheriffs from seven counties were chasing you, but I refuse to help you to raise ostriches. Anyway," I said hopefully, "where are you going to get the ostriches?"

"Oh, that's all right," responded Bill, and my hopes died a-borning.

Then Bill explained that he'd bought four ostriches from a one-ring circus that had just left town. He'd kept it a secret so that he could surprise me when he had the plan all thought out. Well, he'd surely surprised me. His plan was all right as far as he thought, but, as we later found out, he hadn't thought far enough.

"Do you suppose the people in this town will stand for another scheme of yours?" said I, thinking of the time when he'd got an opera company to give a performance in the only theater in town the night Business Men's Club had arranged to give a minstrel show in the same place. I remember that on this occasion, after some argument, they'd finally agreed to have the opera first and the minstrel show afterwards. Me, being Bill's pal and partner in crime, had got in on the fun which was plenty hot and not exactly pleasant. We'd been warned to lead an unobtrusive and censored life as long as we remained in Deadwood Centre.

The "dead" in its name sure applied to this town before Bill happened along to liven it up. But not since.

Suggesting that the town fathers might not welcome the idea of the champion troublemaker raising ostriches settled the matter for Bill. He was going to raise ostriches if it was the last thing he did—and it almost was.

As I said before, although Bill could convince anyone that a lump of coal was a solid gold brick, guaranteed to stand all acid tests, the delusion was never permanent. His schemes always ended up with Bill and me in a beautiful mess.

Every New year's I firmly resolved to turn a deaf ear to Bill's plans and keep him and myself in the good graces of the community. But I'm too optimistic. Whenever Bill has a new scheme, I fall for it with all the eagerness of a Tarrytown clerk being taken in by a city crook on his first visit to New York.

When it became known about town that Bill and I were going to raise ostriches, Deadwood Centre was dubious. The general feeling was that all we'd raise was the devil.

I was more dubious when I found that Bill hadn't even asked their former keeper what they ate. However, Bill had his own ideas on the subject.

"Austriches eat what chickens do," said Bill, "only more."

He was right when he said more.

Why, those ostriches ate so much that by the end of the first week they had consumed enough chicken feed to supply all the chickens in town for a year.

We kept the ostriches in an old corral that Bill had made when we first bought our ranch.

I have to laugh whenever I think of our corral.

When we bought our ranch (that was another of Bill's schemes. We'd bought it because Bill said there was oil on it. There wasn't any oil on our land and there never will be unless Bill upsets an oil can as he is very likely to do. In fact, there isn't anything on our land except a high grade of alkali guaranteed to keep anything from growing). When we bought our ranch, as I said before, Bill made a corral for the horses. Bill had been a cowpuncher in the days when fences were scarcer than hen's teeth. In those days it was a disgrace for any self-respecting cowpuncher to do anything that would take him off his horse.

When Bill found that he had to build the corral, he made such a fuss that you'd think he'd been asked to fence in the whole state. Bill felt so awful about getting off his horse that he had an extra long-handled pick and shovel made for him, and he sat on his horse and dug the post-holes.

"Hank," said Bill to me one day when we were perched up on the corral fence watching our ostriches, "we ought to name them birds."

"First sensible idea you've had this summer," I answered.

"Oh, yeah," said Bill, "well, you don't seem to be strewin' any ideas sensible or otherwise, around the landscape."

Two of the ostriches were big, black fellows with white plumes at the end of their wings and tails. The other two were slightly smaller and were a silver grey.

We argued all morning about what to call them. Finally we agreed to call the black ones "Pete" and "Repete," and the grey ones we named "Kate" and "Duplikate."

Deadwood Centre wasn't exactly overrun with ostriches. In fact, there was such an elegant scarcity of them that most of the worthy and otherwise citizens of the town gathered around our corral to view the feathered wonders.

Everyone that wasn't compelled to be elsewhere was sitting on our corral fence, on account of the ostriches' ability to swallow apples whole. The feeding of our ostriches grew to be the chief pastime. Whenever they swallowed a large object, a big bulge would slowly slide down their long skinny necks.

Anything unusual was hailed with delight in Deadwood Centre. Excitement was such a rarity that even funerals were welcome forms of diversion. Naturally, when it became known that our ostriches possessed such amusing swallowing peculiarities Deadwood Centre flocked to feed them.

Our ostriches practically lived on apples. Watching whole apples slip down the throat of an ostrich was as good as any form of entertainment that Deadwood Centre could afford.

The competition was keen. Our ostriches were kept running from one end of the corral to the other after apples. Bets were made on which ostrich would arrive first. Pete and Duplikate were the favorites.

"Lookit 'em come!" yelled one of Deadwood Centre's prominent citizens who was holding out an apple. "By Gosh, they go twenty-eight feet at every step if they go an inch. Come on, Pete. I'm betting on ya!"

Bill and I were sittin' on the fence enjoying the sight of our ostriches being fed by the townspeople. I happened to glance at Bill, and his ears were twitching something awful.

"Now what?" said I resignedly.

"Hank," said Bill, "let's have an austriches race. Everybody has his favorite and bets are bein' made all the time on which can first get to the guy who has the apples. We could hold the race down at the fairgrounds. Everybody is so het up about the austriches that he'd be willing to pay admission to see 'em race. Lookit everyone betting on which one is going to get to the apple first! We can have a big race and settle all the arguing."

After considerable debate, we finally agreed that we couldn't lose much if the plan did turn out as bad as Bill's other ones. When Bill gets an idea, it always reminds me of the biscuits I make. My biscuits generally look all right, but if you ever ate them, you'd know what I mean.

For a wonder, the citizens of Deadwood Centre didn't object to an ostrich race. In fact, they seemed quite delighted. Most of the stores were closed and Deadwood Centre was seething with excitement. Long before the race was held most of the population was in the grand stands.

From the money we collected at the gates, it appeared that Bill's latest venture was going to be a success.

We'd been having an awful time training those four ostriches to run around the race-track. Ostriches are pretty dumb, but we'd finally got them to understand that if they ran around the track they'd get an apple. And how they could go!

Duplikate and Pete were the favorites. They'd sail around that track like nobody's business. However, occasionally Repete and Kate would get a sudden temperamental spurt and leave the other ostriches to bring up the rear.

No one was certain which ostrich would win the race, and enthusiastic bettors were more excited over which ostrich would win the race than they were over the coming presidential election. And Deadwood Centre is notorious for its interest in politics.

When two o'clock came all was ready for the big event. A speech was made by the mayor and then the town band struck up a tune which was played with more spirit than harmony.

We let the ostriches loose and away they went. First Pete was ahead, then Kate. Then to the surprise of everybody, Repete fairly flew ahead, and left the rest of the ostriches looking like a May breeze trailing after a cyclone.

The uproar in the grandstand must have frightened Repete badly, for he suddenly turned and dashed out of a gate that someone had forgotten to close.

"Hey, ya dang bird! Whoa!" yelled Bill. He went tearing out of the gate on his horse after the ostrich. But Repete didn't have any intention of whoaing, or even of slowing down. To make matters worse, old man Perkins, the mayor's uncle, was coming down the street with a wagon and a team of horses that was the pride of the Perkins family.

When the horses saw Repete coming towards them, they gave a leap and a snort and went tearing down the street. They finally upset the wagon. Mr. Perkins got a broken leg and a permanent dislike for me and Bill. What happened next was as much of a surprise for me as it was to Bill. My pal, having reached the ostrich, attempted to quiet him, but the latter was not to be quieted, and turning around, swung one of his big feet, and zowie! Bill got an awful wham in the stomach that sent him twenty feet. With a sickening thud Bill landed head first on a nearby pile of logs.

We picked him up and took him to a hospital, not knowing whether or not he'd ever come to.

But he did. You can't get rid of Bill, as people in Deadwood Centre have often remarked.

Two days later, when Bill had been patched up enough to make him a presentable specimen, I was allowed to see him. I was kind of shocked when the nurse ushered me into his small white room. Bill was so sterilized and washed up that he didn't look natural.

There he was lying on the bed with most of his head hidden by bandages.

"Hank," Bill said, and he looked up at me with the most pathetically appealing look you ever saw.

"Hank," pleaded Bill earnestly. "Let's not raise 'austriches.' "

ODE TO CICERO

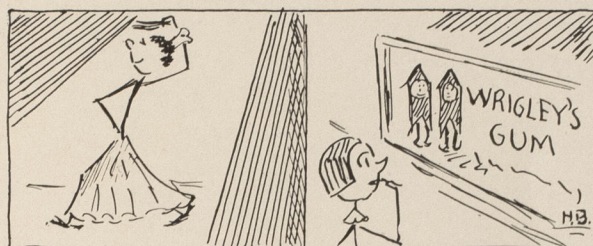

(A Student's Lament)

O Cicero! O Cicero!
 You are the cause of my daily woe;
 Your work is filled with hard construction;
 Attempts to solve it lead to destruction;
 To some, your orations are just a bore
 But to me they're simply another "four";
 Tho' I might study late and early
 I'll never find your language pearly;
 Tho' I might study the whole year 'round,
 I'd never learn all in which you abound.
 Perhaps to study you more, I ought,
 But I think my labors would go for naught.
 You may be a wonderful pathway to knowledge,
 Through you I could get my "recs" to college;
 However, your works are so complex
 I doubt if I'll pass this Latin ex!

—Maurice Clifford.

KILL 'EM OR CURE 'EM

Sidney Smith became a quack
 And wondrous pills he sold
 Guaranteed to cure all ills
 From lock-jaw to a cold.
 Before a rural audience
 He told of all their charm.
 "Pleasant and simple they are to take
 They do more good than harm.
 Full twenty years I've sold these pills
 With no complaints or wails."
 Then spake Bill Dunlap from out the crowd,
 "Well, dead men tell no tales."

AS WE KNOW THEM

The following startling facts were ascertained in a recent contest among the high senior boys. In order to keep the names of the Know-It-All judges a profound mystery no prizes will be given.

"Hoot" Gibson won the grand prize which was awarded for the best excuse for not turning in assignments. Norman Nilson was found to be the best bluffer. George Rydberg was unanimously proclaimed the best gum-chewer. The handsomest boy is Harold Cummins. Because of the keen competition the judges were unable to decide which boy was late most often. First prize for blushing the easiest was awarded to Norman Shallish, while Prentice Sawtelle was acknowledged to be the most loquacious. Because of the lack of competition, Victor Meneketti easily carried off all honors for studying the most. Delbert Crum used the most staycomb on his locks. Bill Barr has been proclaimed as "He who sleeps most in class." The judges had great difficulty deciding who annoyed the teachers the most, but it was finally agreed that Ralph Allen, Stan Cosca, and Jack O'Shaughnessy tied for first place. Louis Macke was proclaimed the owner of the most freckles. Carl Anderson easily walked off victor in the line of forgetting his book the most. The title "Teacher's Pet" was given to Jack Taber by a unanimous vote. Because of lack of competition no decision was reached as to who, among the boys, has the biggest drag in the main office. Howard Smigelow and Henry DeKat were judged to be the best athlete and biggest eater respectively. "Frenchy" Mesple won the reputation of being the most fickle. The most popular boy, with the greatest amount of sex-appeal was found to be Henry White. Jack Davis prefers blondes. Ted Doyle carried, minus competition, all honors awarded to him who makes the most noise. Harold Manke was admitted to have in his possession the dirtiest pair of cords, and, according to the unquestioned decision of the judges, Geoffry Brown was unrivaled when it came to loud dressing.

The reason why these lines appear
Is just because there was a fear
That without their hidden plot,
This would be an empty spot.

—Ode to Oblivion.

OUR FACULTY AS WE WOULD HAVE THEM

If these sights we could see
Our hearts would fill with joy and glee:
We'd fill the air with mirth and snickers
If Mr. Doxsee appeared in knickers;
'Twould move us to bewildered weeping,
If we could catch Miss Petty sleeping;
"The long and short of it," we'd call,
When Gold and Brinkman went down the hall;
We'd remain in a perfect trance,
If Miss Tuttle did a Spanish dance;
It really would surprise us some,
To see Miss Graham chewing gum.
But what we'd really like the best
Is to give our teachers an awful test,
And when we'd finally got all through,
They'd sympathize with me and you.

CLOUD VISIONS

The sun is sinking behind the hills,
A glory of scarlet and gold;
The clouds are glowing and flaming there,
Like Persian pavilions of old.
Warriors together and warriors apart,
You see them half obscured,
On stallions prancing or afoot,
Their wonder has long endured.
Their armor is burnished and shining and trim,
Their tunics of brilliant hue,
Plumes are waving on helmets and casques.
Mere flecks in the vast dome of blue.
The magi and sages of old once looked
On these self-same pictures blown;
But did they see those visions fair,
And claim them as their own?

—Margaret Fisher.

ALLEGORY

After a storm has lashed the sea
And dashed it furiously to the sky,
After fiendish abandon, and wild debauchery,
When all is dead and empty, and a leaden apathy
Has pervaded the world, replacing hate—
Little creeping and crawling things lie stranded on the beach.
Men call them specimens, spoils of the storm,
Bits of the evil element that defies man's barricades,
Now worn by their emotion to weary impassivity.
But theirs is a calm existence, minus soaring fury, plunging hate,
Until a wave of selfish passion has cast them heedlessly into a plane
Of cross-currents of which they had been unaware.
After every futile gesture of impatient violence,
Every losing of the powers of the storm,
Some creatures, weaker, lie stranded on the beach.

MY LOCKER AND I

My locker and I have been close friends
For many and many a day.
We've been acquainted for four long years,
And now I am going away.

How much about my character
My good old locker knows!
How I've banged and slammed on its poor door,
Trying to make it close!

A silent witness it has been
To joyous moods and sad;
It knows how I always behave
When I am good or bad.

Its dull and scratched-up door has oft
My inmost thoughts concealed.
If it should tell of all it's held
How much would be revealed!

The three's I got in chemistry
It knows about full well;
How I fussed and fumed and carried on,
It knows—but will not tell.

Four happy years have passed away—
Years I'll not regret—
For my school days and my locker
I never will forget.

IF

(With all apologies to Rudyard Kipling)

If you can keep your Ford when those about you are selling theirs and buying Cadillacs; if you can just be tickled all to pieces when notified to pay your license tax; if you can feel a quiet sense of pleasure when driving on a rough and hilly road, and never move a muscle of your visage when underneath you hear a tire explode; if you can plan a pleasant week-end journey, and tinker on your car a day or so, then thrill with joy on that eventful morning to find no skill of yours will make it go; if you can gather up your wife and children, put on your glad rags, and start off for church, then have to wade around in greasy bearings, and spoil the best of all your stock of shirts, yet through it all maintain that sweet composure, that gentle calm befitting such events; if you can sound a bugle note of triumph when steering straight against a picket fence; if you can keep your temper, tongue, and balance, when on your back beneath your car you pose, and, struggling there to fix a balky cog wheel, you drop a monkey wrench across your nose; if you can smile as gasoline goes higher, and sing a song because your motor faints—your place is not with common erring mortals; your home is over there among the saints.

TWILIGHT SYMPHONY

Soft silence slipped her arm around
The room and through the open pane,
A breeze lured in, the only sound,
The echo of some sweet refrain.

I listened 'til the dusk was filled
As louder grew the deepening tone,
And then again the room was stilled,
Enraptured, I was left alone.

It was as if the breeze had stole
Away again its gift to me
To carry to some other soul
That sweet, exotic symphony.

Steamboat Captain (who has just fallen overboard): "Don't stand there like a dumb-bell. Give a yell, can't you?"

Ted Doyle (new deckhand): "Certainly sir. Captain, Rah! Rah! Rah! Captain!"

Miss Voorhees was instructing a rising young orator in the art of public speaking.

"When you have finished your speech, tiptoe off the stage," she said.

"Why tiptoe?" said Harold Manke.

"So as not to awaken the audience," replied the irate teacher.

TOLL OF THE YEARS

We've danced and laughed together,
 We've studied side by side;
 We've shared some stormy weather,
 Drifting with the tide.
 Now slipping from our mooring,
 We face the open sea;
 We follow the brightly luring
 Years that are to be.
 We've danced and laughed together,
 We part and go our ways;
 We've shared some stormy weather—
 But many pleasant days.
 Along pathways diverging
 We seek our lone careers;
 Each alone and paying,
 The Toll of the Years.

The big surly man with a gleaming knife in his hand stood before the frail girl.
 "Have you no heart?" she asked.
 "No," he growled.
 "Well, give me a dime's worth of liver," she replied.

A business house, having been solicited for some advertising by a newspaper, wrote back asking what territory the paper covered.

The editor replied: "This paper goes from New York to San Francisco, from the Gulf to Canada, and it keeps me working until 2 o'clock in the morning to keep it from going to Hades."

Before we close, dear readers,
 A word we'd say to you:
 If naught within these pages
 Has caused a laugh or two,
 Just turn back to those pages
 Whereon your "mugs" appear,
 And take one look; perhaps you will
 Then crack a smile, or swear.
