

June 5, 1944.

Dear Kan:

Just a brief note to say again a most sincere "Thank you" for your wonderful hospitality while I was in New York. I am truly grateful.

I was afraid I would lose Yurri's address, and I did. Will you send it to me?

Arrived home completely worn out, but had to plunge back into work at once. How about loaning me your nursery for a vacation. I'll just go around enjoying the quiet and the flowers, and feeling sorry for you in New York. (Which reminds me, I must do some vacation planning at that).

Wish you could be here for some real sunshine and fresh air. There's a great day coming when we all get together again. Please write.

Sincerely,

Dick
