

Dear Ran;

I know you expected a letter from Miss - but for the time being you'll have to be content with one from me - he hardly ever writes unless he is somewhere alone - as his Mother can testify - she said once; "Miss must have been awfully lonely in Florida because he wrote me two letters while he was there"!

Your Camillias are absolutely the loveliest flowers I have ever seen - They always have such romance connected with them I think, too - that when you see them in a bowl in your own home - you feel that some ~~little~~ favor has been shown to you from some exalted place - that surely, Camillias did not bloom on this old me call our Earth - which, romanticizing reminds me of the Indian territory we covered this week - and - that I surely is not a part of our world -

The land itself is so weird up in the northern part of Arizona - and there dwell our Indians - carrying on their own religions - dancing far seen, for harvest - for protection - a whole primitive world that few of us know anything about.

Mess, Gene, Fred and I went up into the heart of the Kapi country last week-end. As we were trying to drive thru a Kapi village we had to stop for some Indians to pass and while waiting Fred, all of a sudden shouted, "look at that Kira" (an underground dwelling) and there coming out of a hole in the ground were Indians all masked, striped to the waist with jewelry, bells, feathers and what not all over them.

We were the only outsiders there and they paid no attention to us.

We found an Indian that could speak English and he told us that no one knows when they "do the"

(4)
dances and that this one was for rain. Well, the funny thing is that that night it rained and straight through the next day! It really was wonderful selling them. We plan to all go home that way and take our time this time. Are you coming back with us? -

What are you doing?

Thanks again so very much for the flowers and the fact that you thought of sending them to us -

As Ever
