

Wednesday rite

Dear Kar: Its late but Im writing and hoping this will get to you by Saturday - your letters were small and there seems a lot I should write about but feel sort of at a loss from where to start -

The kids are fine - getting worse to handle with each successive day but fun anyway - Josh took a roll of pictures today - all of them - he developed them & they all look good - I'll send you the prints as soon as he makes them - it was some funny watching him take them - he had the fofloods, the top light and everything imaginable lit up - looked real professional & sweated like a day laborer while he was at it - He played around with Niki for a while, telling her to smile etc. & she looked up the funniest one side smile that she made sometime he pointed the camera at her - he got one snap of it - its really good. Kazuo was as amiable & willing as ever & took some real nice ones.

Its been very warm the past week - maybe the heavy snowstorm we had just after you left will be the last - golly, the wind blew like everything that time & I swear we got practically all the snow that fell on our street in our front yard - it was piled to the meadows on both our & Waki's side.

Wak got a letter from Son the other day & a very long one (4 typed pages) from Toichi today - she didn't tell me very much about either so I asked if he said anything about your letter & she said no - so I vaguely murmured something about "one of these days you should be getting one from him" & she immediately jumped up & asked why - to which I said there were some things you had to know - she hinted around for information but I kept my mouth shut. - Oh she finally mailed out the funeral pictures today - about time.

In the meantime Yui is "very busy". Toichi spent quite a bit of time with me & the kids while she was in Juver - he did all sorts of things for me but now he doesn't come around so often nor does he do things except when they are obviously have to be done - I have a sinking hunch Yui told him not to. She infuriates me no end now - I can be so busy with things & a little help from her when

Dad better get this out - will write tonight - not a glaze - its pretty lousy but will get along fine.

Wah is not going to work but is planning to leave in February - not sure where but definitely not N.York.

more late -
Sally -