Dear Agnes:

I had expected to call
you in answer to your sweet letter
but now I find myself actually writing a letter.

I think it is perfectly wonderful for you that your son is finally settled here where you can always see him and of course

I'd be delighted to come and have dinner there with you some evening - at your convenience.

I do hope your "sinus" cold has disappeared by now. I hope you are taking penicillin and I hope it will be as beneficial to you as it was in my case. I, too, got penicillin which greatly helped and practically "cured" my sinus condition.

Mother is quite well - though considerably thinner and doesn't enjoy eating like she used to. Dad is alright at the moment and I keep very busy in our respective duties.

I shall look forward to seeing you whenever you find
