ing 90,000, is the site of many famous gridiron championships. Near the campus is International House where foreign students from all parts of the globe make their home. Another feature attraction is the beautiful rose garden where hundreds of varieties bloom here in season.

In nearby Lake Merritt, thousands of wild ducks are fed and banded every year by the city of Oakland. Scientists, studying the migration of the birds, have found that ducks from points as widely separated as Mexico and Canada are annual visitors at this refuge. The lake is a spectacular sight at night, reflecting the tall buildings of downtown Oakland. In the central business district is the City Hall and Memorial Plaza, where flowers bloom the year around as a memorial to the city's war dead. One of the main thoroughfares of the business district is Telegraph Avenue where skyscrapers line the street to make a canyon of commerce. Not far from the shores of Oakland, standing rockbound and grim, is the Federal Prison at Alcatraz Island, where the nation's most hardened criminals are housed.

These cities of the west, their skylines revealing the many huge new buildings that have risen in the past years, together with that mighty engineering feat, the great Golden Gate Bridge, are monuments to the progress of the west. Cities of culture that are proud to face the world from America's land of golden opportunity, Berkeley, the city of finer living, and Oakland, one of the foremost important cities of the West.

LOOKING TOWARDS SAN FRANCISCO

Oakland and Berkeley, California

Oakland and Berkeley are located in the center of the San Francisco Bay area with Oakland to the South of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, the longest bridge of its kind in the world; and Berkeley facing the storied Golden Gate. In Berkeley is located the University of California, identified by the famous Campanile from which can be seen the entire Bay Region. Here also is Memorial Stadium, which seating 90,000, is the site of many famous gridiron championships. Near the campus is International House where foreign students from all parts of the globe make their home. Another feature attraction is the beautiful rose garden where hundreds of varieties bloom here in season.
