Thursday Late Evening
How late?

Hello Yuri,

Darned if our work isn't moving backward. The more we work the longer it seems that it will take to finish. At the rate we are doing, it may mean a week's work. The fellows are getting tired of the stay and are talking of going home.

Haven't said much about your transfer to the M.S.W.. Don't know much about it but it would be a welcomed change. You have the matured consent of Mr. Isubada. But will I get to see you as same as before?

So Sanaro, the whale leather neck is back!

Hum! Guess the people are coming back to dig in for the winter.

Friday afternoon
Off from work early because it began to rain.

There is a solid blanket of rain cloud which covers beyond our range of sight. It looks like we are going to be idle for—?

So Mr. Isubada is trying to bring up a meeting tonight so that we can work in the shed instead of outdoors - also work overtime

6-10 PM. to finish the work as soon as possible.

At the rate we went today - it would take at least 7 days more of working time.

See, during the first two weeks, I looked forward to nothing but coming back to be with you. Taking as matter of course that we shall finish our work in due process. Now, the question <sup>is</sup> "when will we get this?" I can't predict at all.

Have received the letter written on Wednesday.

Your Dad's well-being has often been on my mind, especially when our weather changes because I think that your weather is the same as over here - hoping that he would not be affected by sudden change of climatic conditions. He affects so much of your family's life, and mine to proportionate degree. I do hope that he can give us his consent. I know we can make him very happy and by that, more than make up for the anxious moments we might cause him. By now, I do pray that he is up and about.

Am going out now to mail this letter and try to get the stonaged list - hope for luck.

Dick
