Tuesday 18th

Darling,

I wish that I were able to meet you at the Philadelphia station today. Gee, honey. I miss you to beat the band. Hope there is some lady there to welcome you into the city of Brotherly Love.

But at the time you are reading my letter, you may be rested and even had an interview or five for a job.

Darling, aren't you glad to be out of the center? People are nice and.. well, there are so much to do and think about.

Really, it is swell that Wah is able to come out with you. Back awhile, when I learned that you were coming out alone, I felt as badly as you felt about it.

11/11 present

Things are coming your way. Do you suppose that 'luck' is following you? Anyways I'm going to get jealous, honey, a wa bit. Do you mind? It that you'll be spending your time and interest fr wak and I do want to monopolize you and act as your ration board. Darling, there are a lot to talk about - just in case the Philadelphia offer turns out good it may be possible that you won't be able to run up here. <sup>I want</sup> we'll save most of it. We can plan ahead when we can get together. (both the last two sentences don't make sense since I'm in love but you get what I mean, darling!)

yesterday, I went to wak. The boss put me on time, gave me a book to study and sent me home. He wants to get the reactions at the plant before being positive about letting me work. I will call him up this afternoon and see how things are.

This morning I went to apply for a warehouse job in case the present one falls through. The hours of warehouse job is good - will enable me to take evening courses at Harvard or Boston U. (B.U.) and in the meantime go at my job hunt in a more planned and scientific way. And in the meantime, I will be missing you no end.

Love,

Slack
