Thursday -

It's raining like the dickens. Thunder and lightning and you should hear the thunder! It seems like the tall walls of the buildings reach out, and grab the noise right out of the air and throw it at you.

Anyway, here I sit, sitting in the office, keeping company with my honey. How are you and you and you? You know, I've been looking ahead on the calendar to see what's what. Aug. 19 Sunday. I'd like to spend with you. And Sept. 24, a little far ahead but it's something very special to me?

Mind if I say a little about my working environment? First, Wall Street is narrow and only about four blocks long. One end - the south western end part ends at Broadway St. - the part of the great white way. The other part of Wall ends at the docks, 70 Wall is about a block from the dock on East River side. We can clearly hear the boat whistles and twice a day get a smell of coffee being roasted at the nearby factory.

This morning I worked on piece later - got pretty good at
it. The boss is out most of the day - in fact, there is a man sitting across the room waiting for him to come back.

I guess I better get back to work. It's about 2:15 now.
Had a very late lunch - to avoid the crowd. Try all sorts of places but there is no place there can cook a yurcho meal. Working, see you later. Don't know if I got enough material to write. Jack & Rose
