Tuesday 8:25 AM.

Hello Darling.

Have a few minutes to hell waiting for the store to open up. Was so darned sleepy that I went to bed right after supper without writing to you first.

Thanks for the telephone call. If my letter was a few hours earlier in the day it would have made the 'phoning' unnecessary. It was swell to hear you. but sorry you sounded pretty worried and strained.

You haven't told me much about what the trouble is with D. except that he is very irritating. As you said once that his trouble might be "pathological" but did not elaborate upon it, I wouldn't know what the solution may be.

If things get worse the best would be to have Miller move them out. Had thing to say and do but it is the only answer. That is to say, the old question of "either he goes or I do" story.

Anyways, see what happens and take plenty of time about it.

Have a day off tomorrow and am planning to work on the room —

The store just opened up ~~to~~ so bye darling.

Will be waiting for you.

Will probably be my last letter to you in Boston maybe —

Rich
