Oh, no, it's not the vitamin pills
That make you feel so light and gay.
And keep you singing all the day,
But that the Spring is here once more,
And Spring plus love will make you so.

Our Job In '43

"May I be of service, Sir?" was the query of the London Scout to the confused American traveler. You know the story and also the result; Scouting came to the United States. That was 33 years ago.

Since then, the Boy Scouts of America have grown to be one of the largest organizations of America, second only to the US Army.

Today, it stands as one of the most important contributors to the war effort.

When cries for the lack of scrap metal, rubber, and wastepaper reached Boy Scout headquarters, Scouts all over the United States started the Victory service.

At present, salvaging by the Boy Scouts includes: thousands of pounds of scrap metal monthly, 300,000,000 pounds of wastepaper, and thousands of tons of rubber. Dispatch bearers have distributed 25,000,000 leaflets for the government and millions of pledges for war bonds. Thousands of victory gardens and many harvest camps have been started by the Scouts. Also, Scout messengers are a vital part of the Office of Civilian Defense.

"May I be of service, Sir?" These few words uttered by that unknown London Scout stand out like a beacon in the night, leading the Scouts of America to offer their services through unity and work.

It's "toughen up, buckle down, and carry on to victory" for us in '43.

WE SALUTE

MILES HAMADA

Miles Masayuki Hamada, popular athlete, was recently chosen chairman of the Sports and other activities committee. He is the youngest member of the District Scouters' council.

Hamada's sports accomplishments rate him as one of the few all-star athletes in this center. He placed on the all-star baseball list at the Merced Assembly center as the "man behind the plate" for the Modesto B's; he lead the Deltan E's to the center championship as the keyman at the pivot spot; he paced the Skookums to the football championship and was a triple-threat that placed him on the all-star team.

Miles hails from Courtland high where he starred on the varsity football and baseball teams. He is credited for the school winning its first B basketball crown.

At present, Miles, a senior at Amache high, is the Indians' star guard.
