

KENNETH IYOKI

TANFORAN 8/30/42

Here is a view from the center of the racetrack. I often wondered how the horses felt when pounding down the stretch with the crowd screaming like mad. The building near the center to the left is a shoe room. Beyond that, underneath the grandstand is the counter where one could buy a limited amount from a limited stock. We were issued tickets, each worth as much in trade. We did not receive these tickets when we were supposed to. It is significant that two of those in charge of the camp are men in federal prison. The wooden screen in the background is used to prevent those outside the gate from watching the races free.