

(2) coming along any day.

I've been sending to Michi some of my impressions of the trip abroad. Have they been appearing? I haven't seen any of them as we don't seem to get the Hokubei here. After my return, I met Jobo Nakamura who has since returned to the States. He seemed to like Japan. We went to a Turkish bath and we both took the treatment but I understand Jobo wrote it if he were an innocent observer.

Well, it's about time to wish you all

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

c/o English Mainichi
Mainichi Newspapers
Tokyo, Japan
Dec. 18, 1952

Dear Tomoye & Henri:

I guess you'll agree heartily with me when I say that I'm probably the world's worst letter writer. I write a lot of things but few letters. It must be a complex.

Since returning to Japan, there have been some changes. I've been transferred from Osaka to Tokyo, for one thing, and also found work piled up high and waiting for me.

Your surprise present reached me safely although by a somewhat devious route, from Kobe to Osaka and finally to Tokyo. I want to thank you very much for the gift package, as well as the hospitality in S.F. It was certainly nice seeing everyone again and am wondering when and if I'll ever be able to go over there again.

I suppose, Tomoye, that you're continuing to be busy with your lectures, etc. I've been planning to send you some reference material that might be of some help, but will you let me know what sorts of things you need in the way of printed matter?

This Tokyo weather is cold -- colder than San Francisco, colder than Osaka. I've already caught and gotten over my first cold of the season. The next one ought to be

(3) After over 15 years in Osaka, I'm suddenly plunged into Tokyo and I'm feeling my way around. It's a big city, however, and it has a lot of possibilities.

Regards to all,

(2) coming along any day.

I've been sending to Michi some of my impressions of the trip abroad. Have they been appearing? I haven't seen any of them as we don't seem to get the Hokubei here. After my return, I met Jobo Nakamura who has since returned to the States. He seemed to like Japan. We went to a Turkish bath and we both took the treatment but I understand Jobo wrote it if he were an innocent observer.

Well, it's about time to wish you all

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Dear Tomoye & Henri:

I guess you'll agree heartily with me when I say that I'm probably the world's worst letter writer. I write a lot of things but few letters. It must be a complex.

Since returning to Japan, there have been some changes. I've been transferred from Osaka to Tokyo, for one thing, and also found work piled up high and waiting for me.

Your surprise present reached me safely although by a somewhat devious route, from Kobe to Osaka and finally to Tokyo. I want to thank you very much for the gift package, as well as the hospitality in S.F. It was certainly nice seeing everyone again and am wondering when and if I'll ever be able to go over there again.

I suppose, Tomoye, that you're continuing to be busy with your lectures, etc. I've been planning to send you some reference material that might be of some help, but will you let me know what sorts of things you need in the way of printed matter?

This Tokyo weather is cold -- colder than San Francisco, colder than Osaka. I've already caught and gotten over my first cold of the season. The next one ought to be

c/o English Mainichi
Mainichi Newspapers
Tokyo, Japan
Dec. 18, 1952

(3) After over 15 years in Osaka, I'm suddenly plunged into Tokyo and I'm feeling my way around. It's a big city, however, and it has a lot of possibilities.

Regards to all,

