Dear Mr. Stuart:

I am submitting an article dealing with the problems encountered in taking a family with small children on a trip to Mexico. It is not a travelogue, and while some of the circumstances of the trip are unique because the destination was Mexico, most of the situations are endemic to any extensive travel with children. We had been told that it would be folly to undertake such an excursion, but found that with care and planning, adventures such as ours are not only possible but pleasurable.

For your possible information, I am listed in Who's Who in the Midwest, Who's Who in Art and other biographical dictionaries.

Very truly yours,

Joseph Ishikawa
