Members of a prank-playing "kangaroo court" at Puyallup's pioneer-days celebration, who locked Roy Edwards, 55-year-old civic and fraternal leader, in a room from which he fell to his death, were exonerated today from responsibility for the accident. Pierce County Coroner Paul Melling said the "court" was holding mock trials of men who had failed to grow breads, and among others "apprehended" was Edwards, secretary-manager of the Puyallup Elks Club. In an effort to escape, Edwards attempted a seven-foot leap to another building, lost his balance and fell head first to the sidewalk 11 feet below, suffering a skull fracture. He died three hours later.
