13 May - 45

Mr. & Mrs. Ishida

Will you forgive me for delaying so long in writing to you? Truly the home belongs to her, because after a days' work here and writing to her each day, I'm ready for bed.

But today I have lots of time; in fact, too much of it. Went into town today for a steak dinner; had planned to stay in town and enjoy my pass, but the town is so small and crowded with soliders that after a few minutes you just find yourself doing the same thing over and over.

Instead of staying in town and loafing - decided that I could spend the time more profitably here in camp.

I suppose the training here is no different than that your son received in Florida, but to me, it's rather tough. This getting up so early in the morning is the hardest. On Sundays we can sleep as long as we wish but the force of habit awakens me at the unaccountable hour of 7:00 AM. Lottie's gonna like that when I get home.
It'll be easy for me to get up before her and have break fast ^{ready} for her.

Our group is scheduled to go on the firing range next week and they tell me that will be firing from run-up to run-down. That means that it will be necessary to get up around 3 AM - cause we'll have to walk the 4 miles to the range.

This is a mechanized Army, folks; but not where it concerns the infantry. The way they train us - it seems as if they want us to walk from here to the battlefield.

Mr. Ishida - if you wish - and let me know - I could send you cigarettes.

Thank you both for being so nice to Lottie; in her letters to me, she's always mentioning the things you've done for her. And from the bottom of my heart, I thank your territory

must be love.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Love
P.S.

How is Dad, have you heard from him recently, when he goes into combat as yet.
