

DOOMED MORTON DAM

United States Army Engineers were called upon by the State Game Department yesterday to remove an obsolete power dam on the Tilton River at Morton, Lewis County. This photograph shows soldiers crossing the dam to place explosives.

ARMY TNT RIPS BARRIER

With a roar heard for miles, 150 pounds of TNT placed under water at the center of the 75-foot dam blew water and concrete high into the air. The Game Department wanted the dam out to open up the upper river for spawning fish, and the Engineers gladly took the job as a training project.

SOLDIERS CATCH FISH

Soldiers, many of them from inland states, where big fish are a rarity, scrambled into the water to grab salmon killed and left stranded by the explosion. Here a few of them are holding up their "catches."—A. P. photos.
