Accepted With Reluctance Yesterday's resignation was "accepted with reluctance," at a meeting of the commission's administrative board...

Difficultly Began in June The difficulty between the Canteen and the Travelers' Aid arose last June when Mrs. McChesney was asked to move the canteen from the Union Station where the Travelers' Aid also has a booth.

Mrs. McChesney said that she made her final decision when she was asked to appoint three coordinators to act between herself and the War Commission...

A successor to Mrs. McChesney will be appointed soon, Harrison said.

PORTLAND, Dec. 28.—Hoping to work out an organizational pattern which will bring and end to the strife and bickering which has rocked King County's government...

But here the expensive machinery is bought by individual departments, where it may stand idle a good part of the time—but still not available to other departments.

Sparkman was elected to office on a platform of a business administration for King County, and intends to carry out that policy if possible.

MULTNOMAH County has operated for the past 20 years on what amounts to a county-manager plan. The commissioners there hold themselves aloof from the detail of administration...

The Multnomah County Roadmaster is George W. Buck, an engineer, who has held the position for 20 years, which is sufficient evidence that he has made a success of it.

Buck's original authority was limited to the construction of roads, but as time passed he became supervisor of all county engineering...

ONE of King County's present political disputes is over insurance, with the commissioners handing out the business to favorite insurance agents.

LIKE King County, Multnomah County is beginning to use mechanical equipment for bookkeeping and statistical compilations.

YOUTH ADMITS BOTTLE KILLING

Donald A. Carver, 19 years old, has admitted striking a blow with a beer bottle which resulted in fatal injuries to Harry M. Lyons, 60, Prosecuting Attorney Lloyd Shorett said last night.

The prosecutor said Carver confessed that he struck Lyons over the head with the bottle and took Lyons' automobile for a trip to Centralia after the aged man had given the youth a ride to the Lyons' home, 3912 Hudson St., about midnight, December 13.

He Promised Auto for Girls Shorett said the only reason Carver gave for striking the man was that "I promised to have a car to drive three girls to Centralia."

In his confession, obtained by Shorett and Richard F. Mahoney, chief investigator for the prosecutor's office, Carver, 4710 42nd Ave. S., repudiated his earlier story that he had fired a shot at Lyons, but did not strike him.

The confession came after a one-day investigation by Shorett and Mahoney.

Shot Fired in Air Carver, a slight, meek-appearing youth, said he struck Lyons on the back steps of Lyons' Rainier Valley home, then fire a shot into the air from a pistol he carried and attempted to make it appear the slaying had been done by a woman by leaving lipstick, a powder puff and a pair of women's gloves near the body.

An autopsy showed Lyons died as a result of a beating, and had not been shot.

Carver was arrested December 18 at Third Avenue and Stewart Street when a traffic patrolman noticed him driving the stolen Lyons' machine.

Carver attended junior high school in Kent, he told the officers, and later attended the Advent Academy in Auburn.

Be Careful! REMEMBER... this is the season of rain, fog, ice, and more hours of darkness. It is the season when everyone's vision is impaired... whether he walks or drives. It is up to every person to be doubly careful NOW. Records show that most traffic accidents this time of year are caused by jaywalking... and motorists' failure to signal. It's always a safe rule to STOP, look, then GO! This message published by Seattle Transit in cooperation with Seattle Police Department, Seattle Traffic Engineers, and the Seattle Safety Council
