

2 BUS ARBITERS MAKE 'PROGRESS'

Two arbiters of the Seattle Transit System wage dispute, who have been trying since Monday to select a man suitable to both as the third arbitrator, reported "progress" today.

"I can give you just one word for publication," said Harry J. Ames, executive secretary of the Building Trades Section of the Washington Federation of Labor, one of the arbiters. "That word is 'progress.'"

Ames was named to the arbitration board by the Street Car Men's Union. He met this forenoon with the Seattle Transportation Commission's selection as arbitrator, H. Denzil Hailey, executive secretary of the Washington Metal Trades Association. They will have their next meeting Monday, Ames said.

The dispute, which resulted in curtailment of Seattle's bus service last week through refusal of the union members to work overtime, arose over the Transportation Commission's turning down a union request for a $20 monthly wage increase.

Kubota Changes Moving Day, He and Tenant End Dispute

MRS. SIMON HEBERT, HENRY T. KUBOTA and SHELDON G. HAGEN
New deadline ends dispute

At odds for nearly three days, Henry T. Kubota, returning Seattle Japanese and hotel operator, and Mrs. Simon Hebert, who rents his home at 341 19th Ave. struck a "truce" today in their dispute over occupancy of the house.

Shepherded by Sheldon G. Hagen, Seattle district director of the War Relocation Authority, and Russell Bankson, W. R. A. information officer from Washington, D. C., the 43-year-old Japanese alien and Mrs. Hebert, who has a husband and three sons in the service, reached an agreement today in Hagen's office.

He Didn't Understand

Smiling and shaking hands after Kubota had explained in heavily accented English that he did not understand so many people living in "my house," it was mutually agreed the home will be vacated by June 1.

"The house is occupied by Mrs. Hebert, two shipyard workers, two Boeing workers, and two service men and their wives. Kubota had stated that he would notify Mrs. Hebert to vacate in 30 days, and she had said she would resist eviction because she felt she was performing a patriotic duty in housing the other tenants.

Some tenseness prevailed as Kubota and Mrs. Hebert met in Hagen's office, but it soon vanished.

"When I go away (when he and his family were evacuated shortly after the outbreak of the war) I leave my house," Kubota said. "I understand mother and father with only two children live there while gone. I come back and I think will be more easy for them to find house than myself.

"Agent not tell me these people all live there. I'm sorry. I did not know. I sent notice. Then I read in papers about war workers. I do not want to cause trouble. I sent new notice yesterday. Give until June 1."

Kubota then explained that his wife, in Denver with their two children, has rheumatic fever and suffered a heart attack in August. His physician, he said, had advised him to bring Mrs. Kubota to Seattle.

Shown a copy of the notice by Kubota, Mrs. Hebert said she believed that "this presents an entirely different picture."

Mrs. Hebert Denies Prejudice

"It would have been very difficult for us to have found a place to live on such short notice in these times," she said. "I do not want to be put in the light of being unfair about this."

"I have received numerous calls by persons accusing me of being guilty of racial prejudice and I would like to clear that up now. I have no prejudices. I was only concerned with my tenants being able to find another place to live and not being thrown out in the street."

"If we must find another place, there is nothing I can do but start looking for it. I believe Mr. Kubota is within his rights and I see no other course for me except to move and to give my tenants notice."

Talking with Kubota after they had reached an agreement, Mrs. Hebert said:

"I am sorry to hear about your wife. I met her before she left and I found her a charming, little woman. I would not want to stand in the way of her coming back here because of her illness."

Mrs. Kubota is an American citizen, as are her three children.

GESTAPO SLAYS 34 BELGE, 1 BY 1

By NED NORNNESS
Associated Press Foreign Staff

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Jan. 12.—The bodies of 34 Belgian men and boys lie frozen in grotesque shapes on the floor of a flimsy shanty here. Townsfolk say they were victims of a German Christmas Eve atrocity. The Gestapo had scheduled only more victims, but he made a daring last-minute escape. Today he told of the executions.

Even civilians did not learn of the murder of their menfolk until yesterday, when British troops captured the town. Not until then did a leading citizen and his nephew—the lad who escaped the Gestapo death—reveal the tragic secret. They feared to say anything before, lest the enemy carry out further reprisals.

The mourning townsfolk had believed the men were taken to Germany, as the Gestapo had said.

The 34 bodies were found in the open cellar of a smashed building. They were heaped upon one another as they had fallen. All were removed to the shanty to await burial.

This black hole of Bande is still splashed with the blood of the men. One Gestapo officer shot them in the dusk of Christmas Eve, as they were led through the doorway one by one, the survivor said.

Seccluding himself inside the door, the officer shot each man in the neck and then kicked the tumbling bodies into the open cellar. Later the Germans crudely covered the evidence with timber and planks.

The leading citizen and his nephew said German troops entered Bande on December 21 and the Gestapo came right after them, rounding up what men they could find.

Income-Tax Office To Stay Open Late

To benefit those who must file an income-tax return by Monday, the Collector of Internal Revenue offices on the fourth floor of the Federal Office Building will be open until 6 o'clock today, tomorrow and Monday.

Monday is the deadline for only one out of four taxpayers, according to Clarence S. Hagen, division chief of the office. It is the deadline for paying the last installment on declarations of estimated tax for last year; the day on which farmers must file their declarations and pay their taxes, and the last date for changing or amending a declaration filed last year, if the estimate was 20 per cent or more in error.

Concert, 4 Miles From Battle, Most Notable to Menuhin

YEHUDI MENUHIN

Of all the hundreds of concerts of his own particular experience under the German occupation, Yehudi Menuhin, world-famous violinist, has given, the one that stands out most vividly in his memory is one he gave in October in Antwerp, four miles away from the firing line. The concert was given in the hall of the Naval Hospital, and tomorrow night at the Moore Theatre, under auspices of Cecilia Schultz.

Menuhin said in his introduction to the concert was a "first" for both him and the people of Antwerp.

"Of all the European cities in which I have played, I'd never played there before," he said. "And for Antwerp audiences, I was the first musician to appear after the Germans left."

Menuhin also was the first musician to give a concert in liberated Paris.

Cherished Wines Appear

After the Antwerp concert, there was a small party in a small home next door in what had been Gestapo headquarters. Menuhin never will forget that party, either.

"The mayor was there," he recalled, "having just been reinstated. That day they had sentenced 12 collaborators."

"The family brought out wines they had been hoarding, and we had a different glass for each kind. It was not a rowdy party, but one of the utmost gravity. Each bottle was opened with a sort of ceremony, with the vintage and the age announced. Everyone was still tense and each was thinking, not talking."

Normal Winter Is Returning To Most of Nation

By Associated Press.

Normal winter weather returned to most of the nation today. It was thawing over a large part of the Midwest.

The coldest reported overnight to Chicago was 23 below zero at Greenville, Me., but by this morning it was 4 above there.

A new flow of cooler air spread over Minnesota, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, but the forecasters said temperatures there had gone so far above normal that they would drop only to about normal for this time of year tonight.

Some freezing rain or snow fell in the Southern Great Lakes region and in Western New York State, a few snow flurries were reported in the Northern Great Plains States and there was rain in the North Pacific area and in Arkansas and northeastward into the Ohio Valley. Elsewhere, said the forecasters, there was fair weather.

"ANOTHER RINGER!
You sure are covered with horseshoes, Uncle Dan!"

"It isn't all luck, Ted. I got a lot of practice down South, you know."

"Gee, I wish I could go away for the winter after the war!"

"You can, some day. But that isn't luck, either. You ought to start planning for it now. I learned that the hard way. . ."

"... It all started back in 1917, during the first World War. Your Aunt Martha and I had just got married. I was an instrument maker, so they put me right to work on fire control apparatus."

"We worked overtime a lot and I made mighty good money. It was the first time we'd ever had much of anything to spend, and we sure spent it. You wouldn't believe all the extravagant things we bought."

"But in the winter of 1918 your Aunt Martha took sick. She had to have an operation. Before I knew it, I had $600 worth of bills to pay—and nothing to pay them with. That taught me a lesson."

"So, take a tip from the Government and put every cent you can into war bonds and life insurance and a savings account. You'll be glad you did, some day."

TED: "Another ringer; Uncle Dan! That sure makes plenty of sense to me!"
