BREMERTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Mayor L. Hum Kean apparently was returned today to his second term of three years on the basis of complete unofficial returns in Bremerton's city election.

Kean held a plurality over three opponents in a primary election marked by light voting. About one fourth of the 16,000 registered voters went to the polls.

Comdr. D. J. Saxe, U. S. N., was second with 1,179 against Kean's 2,735 votes. H. O. Dornstead and Martin Bugie trailed.

Mrs. Lulu D. Haddon, commissioner of finance, was nominated to run against C. E. Stewart for reelection in the November final. Commissioner of Public Works Howard Gorst was reelected without opposition, as was E. J. Beard, city clerk.

Jury Acquits Defective In Pistol Case

After deliberating less than two hours, a jury in Superior Judge Howard M. Findley's court late yesterday acquitted Francis Patrick Sutton, 54-year-old Seattle private investigator, of a charge of violating of the Short Firearms Act.

Sutton also was acquitted of a charge of giving false information to obtain a permit from the sheriff to carry a pistol in his work as a private detective.

Sutton was arrested last April as he left a King County courtroom after testifying as a witness in the murder trial of Donald A. Carver, Seattle youth accused of the beer-bottle slaying of an elderly man. The investigator, employed by Carver's counsel, under questioning by Chief Deputy Prosecutor John J. Kennett, admitted he had been convicted of burglary on four previous occasions.

When officers arrested him outside the courtroom, they found a pistol in his possession, and he was charged with the firearms violation, since it is illegal for a person convicted of a crime of violence to carry a pistol.

Swiss, French Exchange Fire
 BERN, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Swiss Department of Fisheries said today Swiss fishermen and French occupation troops had exchanged rifle fire on Lake Constance and that discussions were under way between the Swiss government and French military officials "to avoid conditions which might lead to serious incidents." The department announcement made no mention of casualties. The Fisheries Department declared the French had violated international agreements signed in 1893 and 1897 concerning the rights of Swiss fishermen on the lake.

JOBS UNFILLED AT FORT LEWIS

Although hordes of applicants are flocking to Fort Lewis in the wake of an announcement last Friday by Army officials that 4,500 civilian workers are needed there to fill posts being vacated by Army personnel, the number of jobs available had climbed to 5,000 today.

Army officials said the increase in the number of jobs available is in line with their announcement that "several thousand additional positions will be opened to civilian workers in the near future" as the posts are vacated under an Army directive.

Because of a "land office" rush of applicants, facilities have been enlarged at the fort, with more than 60 persons conducting job interviews, it was said.

Under a program in which the fort has been established as a permanent military installation, all nonmilitary positions will be filled by civilian workers.

Army officials said 200 jobs as truck drivers have been added to the list, along with jobs for shoe repairmen, mechanics and service-station attendants. Positions are open to nearly all types of skilled and semiskilled workers, office workers, craftsmen, ward and mess attendants.

Applicants may consult the civilian personnel office at the post or their local United States Employment Service Bureau or Civil Service Commission. D. C. Slansbery, commission chief here, said scores of Seattle applicants have made inquiries at his office and the U. S. E. S. and have been sent to Fort Lewis.

Rev. U. G. Murphy Aiding In Return of Loyal Japanese

Probably one of the best friends that the returning Japanese and Nisei of this area have is the Rev. U. G. Murphy, 305 17th Ave. S., retired Methodist minister, who devotes his full time to helping them find jobs and homes.

The minister, who is able to converse freely in Japanese, is working in cooperation with the Council of Churches, the National Relocation Authority and other agencies interested in helping Japanese who have been declared loyal to America.

Last week, which was believed to be the peak week of the migration back to this area, saw between 400 and 500 Japanese return.

"They are closing down the relocation centers," Mr. Murphy said, "and we've got to face it. Most of the people have sons or brothers in the United States Army, and they deserve some consideration."

'Father Murphy' to Many
 Mr. Murphy keeps a list of prospective jobs which are called in to him by individuals and firms. He knows the Japanese people and as fast as someone arrives who fits the job, it is filled. He has placed hundreds in domestic jobs, as gardeners, and in other positions.

The minister learned the Japanese language when he did missionary work in Japan from 1893 to 1908.

"The doctors sent me back to die in 1908," he said. "They gave me two years to live, and I didn't comply. I am 76 years old now and still going."

He is "Father Murphy" to his Japanese friends, and part of his rectory has been turned into a haven for them.

Japs Helping Each Other
 "I am having difficulty filling all the requests I get for domestic help, because the young women are expert stenographers and typists, or have learned some other vocation," Mr. Murphy said. "It may be that when jobs are scarce, more of them will be forced to do domestic work."

Mr. Murphy said Japanese who have retained property here have opened their doors to others coming to the city. Several families occupy one home.

"Although they have been given housing at Renton by the W. R. A., it is quite a way out, and these people have to find work," Mr. Murphy said. "Therefore they are helping each other to get settled."

"Nearly every train brings a few more, and I have never been at the station when there have not been some of the Japanese colony there to greet whomever might arrive. I've never seen such successful cooperation. They are always ready to move over for a friend."

Mr. Murphy was busy making arrangements yesterday for an interview for Kenjiro Yoshizawa at Firland Sanatorium, where he may work as a gardener.

Occupying part of the rectory are Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hushiguchi, whose two sons, Tech. Sergt. Nasuo Hushiguchi and Sergt. Hachiro Hushiguchi, are members of the famed 442nd Infantry Regiment. The family made room in their quarters this week for another family and for a soldier home on leave.

PLANE WRECK HUNTED IN HILLS

Guided by a forest ranger from Cle Elum, a search party headed into the hills north of Easton today, looking for the wreckage of a plane which the pilot of a Yakima-bound Army plane had reported down in the area Monday.

Personnel from Paine Field and Sand Point are aiding the search. Military officials estimated it would take three days for the party to make the trip to and from the site of the crash, 16 miles north of Easton.
