

CANADIAN 'MUMS' GROW FOR SHOW

Convention Of Y. L. I. Draws 500

Today marks the beginning of the Young Ladies Institute's Diamond Jubilee Grand Convention, for which 500 members of institutes have come to Seattle from Hawaii, California, Nevada and Oregon.

Miss Lorraine Jones of San Francisco, grand president, will head the delegates and preside at the business sessions in the Eagles Auditorium. In addition to the regular sessions, the convention's program will feature informal events, including a picnic this afternoon at Shady Beach, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus.

This evening a reception for the delegates will be held in the D. A. R. Chapterhouse, and tomorrow morning, the Rev. Edward Meagher, grand chaplain of San Francisco, will be celebrant at mass. The Rev. Joseph P. Dougherty will preach the sermon and breakfast will follow in the Olympic Hotel. In the evening, an informal supper will be served the members and delegates in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

A tour of the city and a boat trip, with dinner on board, are scheduled for Wednesday in the Olympic Hotel. In the evening, the convention banquet on Wednesday evening, in the Olympic Hotel, at which the Most Rev. Gerald Shaughnessy, Bishop of Seattle, will speak, will follow the official report of Miss Jones.

During Miss Jones' term of office, memberships in the institutes have increased by 1,500. Another speaker at the Wednesday afternoon business session will be Miss Florentine Schage, grand secretary of the Y. L. I. and a national director of the National Council of Catholic Women.

The convention will close officially with the installation of new members Thursday evening in the Olympic Hotel.

Art Exhibitions Featuring Work of Northwest Painters

LANDSCAPE, BY GUSTAVE DORE, FRANCE
On exhibit at the Seattle Art Museum

The summer season in the museum and gallery field of Seattle is now in full effect, with the local exhibition centers collectively devoting much space to the work of Pacific Northwest artists.

Visitors to the city will be able to see a brief but extremely important survey of the world's art, past and the present. This is the summer show at Seattle Art Museum, the opening of which coincided with the annual meeting of the Western Association of Art Museum Directors, held recently at the Museum.

During this period the Museum's shows are made up exclusively of material from its permanent collections. These include not only the art of the past (several galleries of the Oriental arts are largely from the Museum's famous Eugene Fuller Memorial Collections) but also a gallery of contemporary paintings in which regional artists take a prominent place.

The Henry Gallery at the University of Washington has opened its customary summer exhibition of students' work, selected from the schools' production during the past school year. The material ranges from paintings and drawings through the crafts and interior design. Many of the works shown are a professional caliber.

Also on view is the Henry painting collection, which includes several fine paintings well worth the visit.

Seattle for some time has had three sales galleries, largely devoted to the exposition and sale of work by regional artists. The oldest establishment is under the direction of Theodora Harrison, who doubles as artist of professional standing and gallery director. This is the Little Gallery at Frederick and Nelson. Several exhibitions of young artists work will be shown there this summer. The current exhibition features watercolors by Cock van Gent, Dutch national who soon will return to Holland.

Betty Willis's Fifth Avenue Gallery of Lowman Hanfords this summer is stressing regional artists' work. Among these are R. C. Lee, Ambrose Patterson, Hilda Morris, Irene Riley and William Givler and Charles Heaney. The group includes sculptors, painters and printmakers, and their work individually shows various interpretations of this region.

The Studio Gallery, in the Medical Arts Bldg. under the direction of Henry Ross, offers four Seattle artists work to the public. These include Blanche Morgan, George Tsutakawa, Wedo Georgette and Louis Huebner.
