SWITCH ENGINE RUNS AMUCK AT GLENDALE

Locomotive Just Misses Cage of Lions in Circus Parade and Picks Up Caboose in Which Train Crew Sleeps.

ONE OF MEN INJURED IN JUMP TO GROUND

GLENDALE, Mont., Monday, July 18.—An exciting race between a runaway switch engine and an automobile occurred here a day or two ago. Two switch engines were at work in the Northern Pacific yards when one "side-swiped" the other. Engineer Ludwig Anderson shut off steam and he and his fireman jumped just as their cab was demolished by the collision, but some thing struck open the throttle of the locomotive and he was hurled down and bounded away, full steam on, down the main track. It disregarded the yardmaster's attempt to wave it down, and scattered a section crew, Campbell and Brothers circus parade was crossing the track and the runaway just missed a cage of lions. Later it struck a caboose and an empty freight car which became attached to the runaway. In the caboose a train crew was sleeping. One member of the crew was awakened by the jar and hastily donning his clothes leaped from a window and was injured, painfully.

LOOKS IN LOS ANGELES SAY THEY'RE HAPPY

Home, However, Shows Evidence of Great Poverty, and Family Even Obligated to Sleep on Floor.

NEIGHBORS DIVIDED IN THEIR FRIENDSHIP

Young Mother Says She's Absolutely Indifferent to Public Opinion and Wants to Be Let Alone.

LOS ANGELES, Monday, July 18.—After a residence of a month in the city, keeping closely within doors to avoid the curiosity of neighbors, a young mother, Emery Aoki and her Japanese husband have been found. They were in an attractive two-story house at 4269 South Main Street, where they had moved three weeks ago under cover of a fire that had broken out and escape the scrutiny of neighbors whose objections might have been aroused by the odd sight of this Japanese-American family. "Little Sophronia Frances Uta Aoki, just a year old, was beating her tiny tanned hands against the window pane, looking out at the street through the window. Mrs. John Emery, the grandmother, stood guard at the front door of the strange family, her face a mask of refuge. A few curtains hung in the windows. House Comforts Few. Outwardly the place looked cheery. Within the scant furnishings told a mute story of the near-poverty that Aoki and his wife have been fighting against as they have been buffeted from one place to another because of unsympathetic neighbors. There were no beds in the house. The family sleeps on mattresses upon the bare floor, the women working in the city. In a few weeks, he said yesterday, the interior of the house will take on a more comfortable appearance, that is, if no opposition to the family develops in the neighborhood for and against the neighbors do not see much of the Aoki's. The women spend most of their time indoors, waiting for the return of the family, and sprinkles the lawn. The house, for a long time unoccupied, began to move in after the Aoki's moved in. The change was so much for the better that M. R. Sherer, who lives next door, found them desirable neighbors. The Aoki family asks no sympathy and accepts no financial aid. Offers of financial assistance meet the same fate. Absolutely Indifferent. "I am absolutely indifferent as to what the people think about me," said the young mother yesterday. "Why speak of sympathy, when it does not help me? I want to be left alone. We want no substantial assistance, though we are in need of it. I am as self-sufficient as she stood with the little black-haired babe in her arms. 'We are prepared to fight our own battles,' repeated Mrs. Emery, as she looked up from her sewing machine, where she was at work on baby clothes that would fit an infant much younger than little Sophronia. 'We will buy everything that we need, and we have been hard and long made us hard.' 'The destinies of the home are presided over by Mrs. Emery. She has means to call and has a steady stream of neighbors to call. Aoki goes to work early in the morning, neatly attired. He walks along with a jaunty air, and he is commonly talked of as a well-dressed man. 'I see we cannot get into a quiet home,' he said. 'I think we will have no trouble living here,' he continued. 'The wife and I are both of the old-fashioned kind. We are not the kind of minded people. We ask to be left alone; that is all. We know that Christians should be helpful to the poor, but we do not do or think I am working, and I intend to stay here and establish myself.' May Be Forced to Move. Aoki's plans for the present are only temporary. Though considerable sympathy for his wife and the babe exists among the immediate neighbors, a queer rule has been established among the property holders in the neighborhood. Anticipating that the tract of land surrounding the Aoki house would attract the wealthy, who would be glad to buy the original deed setting forth that if the property in the tract should be occupied by Chinese, Japanese or negroes, it should be re-sold to the original owner. There are neighbors in the locality who do not care to press the operation of this rule. It was with the understanding that real poverty was pressing upon the little family, that the divorce employment was yesterday made to Aoki. 'We feel certain that they have not many of the commonest comforts,' said Mrs. Emery, as she looked at the house. 'It is practically empty. There has been no furniture brought in and the one couch they have, Mrs. Emery has hammered and fixed out in the yard.' Not Utterly Cheerless. But if the house be poor, it has the living spirit of home. Aoki himself washes the windows and the walls are spottedly. Pale pink straight Japanese curtains blowing out over white muslin drapes, and the light from the window of cheer. In the front porch, screened from the curious, swings a white hammock, and here sleeps little Miss Aoki. Nearly every day the girl is seen about the lawn, playing with the American Paddy bear and Japanese doll. When Aoki comes home dressed in an American suit of brown, dark green tie and big felt hat, and comes running up the steps, the wife hurries to his arms, the stern-faced mother-in-law relaxes and cooed smilingly "Da-da." Are you satisfied? "I am truly happy now, despite all your difficulties, and are you actually reconciled since the withdrawal of the divorce suit instituted at Reno?" she asked. Declares They Are Happy. The wife nodded gently and slipped her hand into her husband's as he replied, "I am satisfied with our life here, our automobile and the house. Some people don't think so, but as soon as I am established here, I will welcome them to my home to see if it is not an ideal place." Mother (turning to Mrs. Emery) knows we are happy, and all we ask is to be left alone and to live on in peace." From Mrs. C. C. Pierce, who with her husband for years has done much missionary work among the Japanese. It was learned that the Aoki's have ordered their household goods shipped from Seattle.

S. S. S. & BLOOD PURIFIER

A REAL TONIC

Any system that needs a tonic needs also a blood purifier, for it is the weakened and impure condition of the circulation that is responsible for the run-down state of health. We have only to recognize the importance of pure, rich blood in preserving health, to realize the danger of a weakened or impure circulation. Deficient blood nutrition weakens the system, and it can not resist disease like a strong robust constitution. First the body has a worn-out feeling, the appetite is feeble, energy begins to flag, the digestion is bad, etc. If the condition is not corrected at this stage more serious results are sure to follow, and sometimes a long debilitating spell of sickness is the result. S. S. S. is Nature's tonic, made of roots, herbs and barks. It is not a nerve stimulant, but a medicine that steadily builds up every portion of the system by cleansing and enriching the blood, and in this way supplying an increased amount of nourishment and relative powers to every portion of the body. S. S. S. quiets the overstrained nerves, improves the appetite, tones up the stomach and digestion, and thoroughly enriches and purifies the blood. S. S. S. is a real tonic because it is a real blood purifier. S. S. S. contains no harmful mineral and persons of all ages can use it with the same beneficial results. Be sure to get S. S. S. for your tonic this year there is nothing else "just as good."
