

Our First Showing Of New Spring Suits

These two illustrations as shown represent models that are considered especially good this spring. They come in all the new shades and fabrics that are known to the manufacturers. A small cash payment and then is all it requires to buy them.

$100 A WEEK

ALTERATIONS FREE

$30

Union Made, $25

Comes in two- and three-button blue serges, brown, black, tans, etc. All prices from $15 to $25 and up. Come in and get our prices and terms. Our garments will bear the closest inspection. We especially invite the ladies to come just for a look before making their final selection. Open Saturdays until 10 p. m. "Union made suits."

SEATTLE 1119 Third Ave. GATELYS TACOMA 1125 "C" St. Near Seneca CREDIT CLOTHIERS South of 11th.

MUSICAL JINKS ON AT PRESS CLUB TONIGHT

Something Doing After 11 o'clock when Longacre Quartet and Orchestra Get Busy.

mal musical jinks will be pulled off at the Seattle Press Club, in which the Longacre Male Quartet, now starting at the Majestic Theatre, will be a feature along with the house orchestra, led by Charles Lombard. The affair will be impromptu. Secretary Friend and Robert E. McGinn, consisting of a committee of one, who has the affair in hand, promises plenty of sandwiches and enough amusement to complete an hour or two of pleasant communion.

Three Big Eilers Piano Clubs

Now Forming—Why Not Join Today?

Scores of your neighbors and friends have already joined, and as a result are now enjoying good music in their respective homes. Ask them about us and these pianos and this plan. Come and select yours today, or telephone Main 395 or Independent 4377, tell us just what you want and have a splendid, new, high-grade piano in your home before nightfall. All the clubs are filling up rapidly. Bear in mind, also, that membership in these clubs is limited, and if you are interested, it will be well to come in and make your selection without further delay.

You are not asked to take one style of one particular make—the contrary, you choose between a dozen or more of the most desirable and worthwhile makes in the very latest case designs and finishes. If you can pay $7.50 down and $1.25 weekly, join "Club B" and select a $450 piano for $27.50. "Club C" members secure a $550 piano and save $101 in the purchase—terms $11 down and $1.50 weekly. Members joining "Club D" have the choice of either a $650 upright or player-piano for $47.50, on payments of $15.50 down and $2 per week. There is no better time than the present to investigate.

Washington's Pioneer Music House Third and University

THE BANK OF CALIFORNIA

National Association.

HEAD OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, UNITED STATES DEPOSITORY

BRANCHES AT SEATTLE AND TACOMA, WASHINGTON, AND PORTLAND, OREGON

Capital and Surplus $16,400,000

Invites Accounts of Banks, Corporations, Firms and Individuals
Pays Interest on Term and Savings Deposits
Sells Drafts and Cable Transfers,
Issues Letters of Credit Available in All Parts of the World.
Direct Correspondents in Alaska, China, Japan and Australia

THE BANK OF CALIFORNIA

National Association.

801 SECOND AVE., SEATTLE, WASH.

HATFIELD MAY START NEW FEUD IN MEXICO

Wild Bill, of Sanguinary Fame in United States, Kills Native Member of Lower California Rebel Band.

TROUBLE BETWEEN FACTIONS FEARED

Hundred Insurrectos March Out of Mexicali to Form Juncture With Advance Guard That Left Wednesday.

MEXICALI, Mex., Friday, Feb. 24.—"Wild Bill" Hatfield, a member of the famous McCoy-Hatfield feud of West Virginia, who is one of the American recruits in Gen. Leyva's rebel army, last night shot and killed a Mexican insurrecto named Francisco. Hatfield used an automatic gun. Francisco was taken to the international line by his Mexican comrades and rolled across the border, where he was picked up by the Red Cross attendants and taken to the hospital in Culiacan, where he died. Nothing was done with Hatfield by the insurgents. It is feared the shooting may cause a serious feud between the American and Mexican members of the rebel army. A hundred insurrectos marched out of Mexicali at midnight last night and headed westward to form a juncture with the advance guard of sixty sent out Wednesday. With the detachment leaving last night went Gen. Leyva, who will command the column of rebels in its operations against Ensenada. It is reported here that insurgents are certain to attack Tia Juana on their way to Ensenada.

SIX DESERTING SEAMEN HUNTED THROUGH BRUSH

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Friday, Feb. 24.—Six deserters from the armored cruiser California, flagship of the Pacific fleet, today are being sought in the brush between San Diego and the Mexican line. Originally there were seven, but one of them, Carl C. Gordon, was accidentally shot through both legs yesterday and is now being treated in the city. The men have obtained civilian clothes, carbines and plenty of ammunition. When the men were four miles from the line, Little trace of them was found today and it is believed they are heading eastward to await the expected attack of the rebels on Tia Juana, lower California.

NOTHING HEARD FROM 500 FEDERAL SOLDIERS

EL PASO, Texas, Friday, Feb. 24.—Nothing has been heard from 500 federal troops sent south from here last night by Gen. Navarro. It is known that the rebels are attacking the insurrectos had wrecked a locomotive by running it into a burned bridge. Madero and his insurgent command are south of there. Mail advices to The Herald from Torreon say that insurgents held up a train at Torreon Saturday but did not molest the passengers. They previously had robbed the station agent of $73.

AMERICAN SEEKS TO PROTECT REBEL SONS

PITTSBURG, Friday, Feb. 24.—Peter Blatt, of this city, a retired wagon manufacturer, telegraphed Secretary of State Knox last night asking that the government intervene with the Mexican government on behalf of Edwin M. Blatt, aged 21, arrested while bearing arms in the present insurrection. In his last letter to his parents, Blatt said he was leaving El Paso to join the insurrectos, partly because he sympathized with the cause and partly because he took up arms for a time and then became a street car conductor.

PALOMAS CAPTURED BY BAND OF REBELS

EL PASO, Tex., Friday, Feb. 24.—Col. A. C. Sharpe, commanding Fort Bliss, has received advices that Palomas, opposite Columbus, N. Mex., twenty-one miles west of El Paso, has been taken by the insurrectos. Federal officials had long since abandoned the place. About 100 recruits joined the insurgent army at Palomas, Col. Sharpe says he was advised, but as the troops could not stop there.

MEXICALI REBELS MAKE RICH CAPTURE

WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 24.—An official telegram received at the war department from Gen. H. G. Otis, of Los Angeles, reports that insurrectos in the neighborhood of Mexicali have captured a train loaded with supplies for the rebel army. The train employed on the construction of the dike along the Colorado River, just across the international line. If this information is confirmed, officials say it probably will lead to renewed representations to the Mexican government pointing out the necessity of preventing interference with important engineering work as injurious to the welfare of the settlers on the American side of the line.

AEROPLANE SCOUTS TO START WORK NEXT MONTH

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Friday, Feb. 24.—Following spectacular flights in which Philip Parmelee and Lieut. E. H. Foulis, in the army airplane rose about 7,000 feet at Fort Sam Houston today, it was announced that the military will with five members of the signal corps will go to Laredo next Tuesday to do scout duty along the whine along the Mexican border.

MEXICAN COLUMN BACK AT JUAREZ

EL PASO, Tex., Friday, Feb. 24.—The entire command of Mexican federalists sent south last night against Madero returned to Juarez at 2 o'clock this morning. They turned back at Lucero instead of detouring when they found the track obstructed. Chihuahua is completely cut off from the rest of the world, according to railroad advices received in Juarez. There has been no connection between Juarez and Chihuahua since January 29. Now a bridge burned south of Chihuahua at Ortiz completely cuts off that city.

SUSPECT RELEASED

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Friday, Feb. 24.—Fred Kann, arrested here yesterday on suspicion of having been one of the dynamiters of the Los Angeles Times Building, was released today after proving he was employed at local hotel at the time of the explosion.

TERRIBLE SEA DISASTER

CONSTANTINOPLE, Friday, Feb. 24.—A local newspaper reports the Turkish steamship Turist, filled with mosque pilgrims, was burned at sea. Not one of the passengers and crew escaped death. Official confirmation of the report is lacking. "Conscience," said Uncle Eben, "is only a still, small voice; an' half de time when it tries to speak up it finds dat de line is busy."—Washington Star.

See Our New City

Every day we are taking a good number of buyers to see the Navy Yard and Navy City. We have city water in the streets, sidewalks and telephones on the property. There are several families living there, who are well satisfied with the improvements and the great boosters. We will build you a house, and you can pay for it on payments. Do not miss this opportunity. We have been successful with our new city? Because land bought in Navy Yard City has a great future. It has real merit. Money invested there is safer than in any bank, and will bring in large returns. Navy Yard City is practically alongside the U. S. Navy Yard at Bremerton, and we are offering

Large Tracts at $75
Large Lots at $40
On terms of $2.00 and $4.00 monthly.

We Pay All Expenses
To show you everything over there. The daily papers are telling you every day that Uncle Sam is spending millions of dollars on the Navy Yard. Can you doubt land values will increase? Go with us tomorrow, as we are making sales every day and these prices will not last very long. Call on our office for more particulars. Beautiful Bird's-Eye View Folder of the Navy Yard and vicinity.

Bremerton Development Co.
106 Cherry St., Ground Floor.
Office Open Evenings Till 9.

DURAND STILL HARPING UPON SAME OLD THEME

Census Director, to Hide Own Injustice, Persists in Shouting of Crooked Work by Others.

ENTERPRISING CITIES SCORED FOR ACTIVITY

In a circular printed by the government printing office at Washington and issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, Census Director Dana E. Durand undertakes to justify his scathing treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special agents and enumerators to secure census returns. Durand urges the passage of a law forbidding the "unofficial circulation of printed matter containing census questions," such as were used throughout the country in all enterprising cities. This undertaking to make the national count approximate as near as possible a true and accurate result. Durand charges with "dishonesty against the cities where civic bureaus were organized to reinforce the inadequate federal treatment of Washington cities in the 1910 enumeration and reiterates his charges that there were "deliberate conspiracies between private individuals and local special