BODIES OF DAVIS AND RYAN LIE AT MORGUE

Remains of Brave Seattle Patrolman and Thug Who Fought Amazing Duel With Him Rest Side by Side.

DYING OUTLAW TELLS OF PISTOL BATTLE

With Stamp of Approaching Doom Upon His Brow, Lawbreaker Pays Tribute to Cool Courage of Bluecoat.

HE bodies of Patrolmán Judson P.
Davis and Bandit John Ford, alias Paddy Ryan, lie side by side in the morgue today, victims of a duel as strange as any other in which two humans ever engaged. Davis on one knee and a foot and Ford, paralyzed from the waist down, squatted on the pavement and emptied their weapons at one another on Boylston Avenue, near Denny Way, early Thursday night. Denny Way, carly Thursday night

"We just sat down and fought it out," Ford said last evening. "Oh, yes, the man who was half kneeling sot me (referring to Davis). He went to his knees with the first shot, or rather one knes was on the ground and he rested on the other foot. Then something hit me and kneeked me down, and although I could sit up and use my gun and had all my wits, I couldn't get up. "We shot back and forth at one another and finally I hit him hard, for he dropped cold. He was surely a game man. After we had stopped shooting, I heard shooting back of me. I guess the other officer was shooting at the Swede."

heard shooting back or me. I guess the other officer was shooting at the Swede."

Bullet Proves Story.

Mute witness of the tragedy and of the fact that the patrolman gave the bandit his mortal wound before he received his own was a builet removed from the back of the dead bandit at the Butterworth morgue this roorning. Patrolman H. C. Smith had used a "long" 38-caliber Colf's cartridge 11d Davis a "short" builet of the same caliber in the battle of builets that was a culmination of a reign of burglaries and robberles that has existed in this city for the past two weeks.

Ford died of his wound at the city hospital a half hour before the midnight hour last night. In his dying request, the difference in the mental and moral caliber of the bandit and his opionent in the duel was most strikingly shown.

Davis, a university graduate, a man of good, sound education, hopeful of ranking high some day in the calling he had chosen, had had a pretty hard row to hoe, but he had triumphed and was getting towards his goal. Ford, the bandit, had his course, too, but it was a crooked, devious and desperate way.

Ford's Dying Statement.

Ford's pying Statement,

"Just write my mother these words.
Say: I got into a h—l of a mix-up with the police and they shot me hard."

This was Ford's dying statement to his mother, Mrs. B. Ford of 334 Central Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

"But". Kindly expostulated the nurse, "you do not want to use that language in a letter and, particularly, to your mother."

in a letter and, particularly, to your mother."

"Little woman," sadly smiled the dying bandit, "I have lived in the underworld, with bad men and bad women, for many years and I don't know how to use language before a lady. You just write it as if you were writing to your own mother and tell her all the truth."

In that one flash of affection Ford, the bendit, summed up what probably was the one real, kindly thought he had expressed or felt in years.

Ford's statement last evening cleared up the whole unfortunate affair that ended in his own death and that of the brave officer. According to his own adfrairshors he had come here from San Francisco two weeks ago and met Axel Ness at the Amidon bar, First Avenue

"Let's get out on the hills and get some easy money." Ness, who has lived here for years, is alleged by Ford to have said to him.

They established a working criminal partnership. Ford said Ness gave him the automatic pistol he used in the duel. At this juncture, he reiterated that his right name was Paddy Ryan and that he was born in Galway, Ireland, thirty-six years ago. He later took his mother's name by a second marriage, that of Ford. Under this name he had been known for the major portion of the past ten years.

known for the major portion of the past ten years.

Started Out on Wednesday.

On Wednesday night, the two men made their first appearance as highwaymen on the streets of this city, according to Ford. They held up H. H. Farmer, at Ninth Avenue and Terrace Street, and "strong-armed" him, taking §8. Farmer reported to the police later that a man with an Irish brogue first covered him with a pistol and that a man with a Swedish dialect struck him.

Later in the night they held up Leon Munson, of 104 Belmont Avenue, but were frightened away by the appearance of a man and a woman. On Thursday night they started out early for more victims. Then they encountered Patrolmen Davis and Smith. The rest of the story has been told.

What remains to be told, however, is concerning the last rites for the dead bandit and the dead officer. For the latter, as his due, aside from the natural admiration and affection that exists for the brave and the true, and the public feeling aroused over his martyrdom, there will be a band of music, flowers, a heautiful casket and a marching cortege of sorrowing friends—policemen, marines and civilians.

For Ford, the dead bandit, probably an old Irish mother is shedding the only qualm for his death. There will be no flowers, no funeral procession.

TRESTLE TO HANDLE BEACON HILL CARS

Traffic Will Not Be Interrupted by Other Streets.

Other Streets.

Street car traffic to Beacon Hill will not be interrupted by the grading and regrading of Dearborn and other streets, threatened as a result of a cave-in of property immediately west of Twelfth Avenue South, on which tracks of the Seattle Electric Company are situated.

The question of a temporary trestle over the regrade district at Dearborn Street was discussed at a conference in the city engineer's office today when Chief Engineer George P. James, of the Seattle Electric Company, announced the willingness of that corporation to construct a temporary trestle at any point the city may advise. Lewis & Wiley, contractors, were represented as well as the department of public utilities and the plan as adopted was agreed to by the Seattle Electric Company. It calls for a temporary trestle immediately west of the temporary bridge recently constructed by the city, providing the city is able to obtain permits across the one block rorth of Charles Street. By this arrangement, which it is expected will be consummated without difficulty, the street car company trestle will extend in a diagonal direction from Norman to Charles Street. This will allow completion of the Dearborn Street at Twelfth Avenue South without interruption to car truction of a permanent steel bridge over Dearborn Street at Twelfth Avenue South without interruption to car truction.

TO INSPECT NEW BOILER

Mayor George W. Dilling today granted a leave of absence to Boller Inspector William Murray to allow him to go to Saginaw. Mich. to inspect a new type of boller. The city will be reimbursed for the time that Murray is out of the city by the company manufacturing the boller and his expenses will be paid by the same concern. The boller in question is of recent patent, the only one in Seattle being used by the Schwager & Nettleton lumber mills on the West Waterway.

NEW JAPANESE TREATY RATIFIED BY SENATORS

Western Men Interpose No Objections, Despite Fear That Bars Will Be Let Down to Coolie Labor.

PRESIDENT TRUSTS IN HONOR OF ORIENTALS

Believes That Prompt Acceptance of New Agreement Will Promote Feeling of Cordiality Between Nations.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Feb. 25 .-The next step to be taken to make opera-tive the new treaty of trade and com-merce between America and Japan is to gain the approval of the Japanese emper-gain the approval of the Japanese empor-or and the imperial privy council. It is not necessary that the treaty should be ratified by the Japanese diet. Then will follow the exchange of rati-fications, that will take place in Tokio be-fore May 21, making the period of three months allowed in the treaty for the ex-chance. The markies to the exercise will change. The parties to the ceremony will be the Japanese minister of foreign af-fairs and Thomas J. O'Brien, the American ambassador to Tokio.

can ambassador to Tokio.

As the Japaness government is anxious to begin the arrangement of its fiscal program at the earliest possible moment, it is presumed the exchange of ratifications will take place almost as soon as the documents can be transferred from Washington to Tokio, that should be in a month. The last step will be the issue of proclamations by President Taft and the emperor of Japan formally declaring the new treaty in operation. the new treaty in operation.

WASHINGTON. Saturday. Feb. 25.— The new Japanese treaty of trade and navigation was ratified last night after a two hours' executive session of the Sen-ate. While the apprehension of Western sepators that the treaty might let down the bars to coolie labor was not entirely removed, these senators contented them-selves with expressing their solicitude. They interposed no objection to ratifica-tion:

selves with expressing their solution. They interposed no objection to ratification.

The action, in promptly confirming the new agreement, is expected to do more to prove the feeling of cordiality that this country has for Japan than anything done for many years. It is regarded as a manifestation of highest confidence in the advanced civilization of that nation. The effect will be to permit Japan to enter at once upon a reorganization of its, financial system and the making of new tariffs with all nations.

the making of new tarilis with an matitions.

All Treaties Expire.

Japan's treaties with other powers are to expire July 17. That with the United States, by reason of its later ratification, would have continued until the same date a year later had not this government consented to its expiration at the same time as the others.

Failure to have ratified the new treaty would have delayed the operation of the Japanese program for a year beyond the time when it was planned to put it into effect. It would have meant much loss of revenue to Japan and continuance of the existing ireaty with the United States for another year would not have benefited this government according to the representations of the state department on the subject.

When the new treaty was received from the President on Tuesday, it immediately became the, subject of wrangles. Pacific Coast senators feared it might have an effect on the labor situation on the Western Coast, by reason of the omission of the clause in the treaty of 1834, which it supersedes, recognizing the right of this government to pass an exclusion law. Friends of the not menace the labor situation in their state.

Several other Western senators became alarmed however, at what seemed to them unseemly haste in pressing the Senate to act. They desired sentiment to crystallize in their states and therefore prevented action for three days. Supporters of the treaty endeavored to show that the presence of the clause on the subject of immigration in the treaty of 1894 was obnoxious to the dignity and pride of the Japanese empire, especially as neither it, nor any similar clause, is in any treaty with any other country. It was argued further that the existing treaty would have expired in another year and this country could not hope to induce Japan to sign a new treaty containing such a clause.

After a full discussion, the Western senators said they would not stand in the way of ratification, which was accomplished without a roll call.

CALIFORNIANS PLEASED AT ACTION OF SENATE

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Saturday, Feb. 25.—Leaders in both houses of the Legislature, which is strongly Republican, issued statements last night concerning the ratification of the treaty. Senator Leroy Wright, of San Diego, chairman of the Senate committee on federal relations, said:

"I believe all classes of people of the Pacific Coast are pleased that the treaty has been ratified.
"The opposition that developed in the California Legislature was largely the result of a misunderstanding of its provisious.

result of a misunderstanding of its provisions.

"California is extremely desirous that the spirit of amity and good will between Japan and the United States should continue uninterruptedly.

"If the Legislature could speak it the Senate in having consummated so happy an adjustment of the difficulties."

Assemblyman George Freeman, of Riverside, chairman of the Assembly committee on federal relations, said:
"I believe the interests of the Coast are protected."
This was the general sentiment, but the wily governor evaded giving an opinion on the subject.

"America will never regret this fresh evidence of confidence in the good faith of Japan. The United States has done a great thing for this country."

TAXI AND AUTO CRASH

TACOMA, Saturday, Feb. 25.—With both cars going at high speed, a heavy touring car crashed, into a small taxlcab at Sixth Avenue and Ainsworth Street this morning and hurled the taxlcab across the street. The smaller car barely missed a telegraph pole, shot onto the sidewalk and hit 20-year-old Harold Haverkamp, son of a wealthy cigar manufacturer. The boy was knocked twenty feet through the air, his body turning a somersuit, and fell into a vacant lot. He was badly bruised, but not seriously injured.

M'CUMBER, IN SPEECH OPPOSES M'CALL BILL

Responsibility for Conditions With Which They Are Now Confronted, Charged in Part to Farmers.

RECIPROCITY WOULD HURT AGRICULTURISTS, HE SAYS

North Dakota Senator Scores Press for Wave of Free Trade Sentiment That Would Destroy Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Feb. 25.—Responsibility for the conditions with which they are now confronted was charged in part to the farmers' themselves by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, today in a speech in the Senate against the McCall bill, which puts into form for enactment into law, the provisions of the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

Holding that the ratification of the agreement would spell disaster for the agreement would spell disaster for the agreement would spell disaster for the agreements urged for lower rates of duty at the time of the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill, and their having given their votes in the ensuing election to gress who had voted with the leaders in the two houses, had been the undoing of the farmers. He declared that when a crusade against the Thole tariff system was launched in the press that "natural conservatism lost balance and everything in the tariff bill was condemned." "That we needed the money," he continued, "to run the government was lost sight of, and a wave of free trade sentiment that would have destroyed every vestige of protection and left the government without revenue, swept over the country."

Mr. McCumber referred to the sectionalism that developed in the tariff situation and the desire of one part of the country to have its products pretected while those of another part should be made to compete with the free goods brought in from abroad. He said:

agriculturalists. He dwelt upon the threat to the farmers of the United States that lay in throwing open this country for the free entry of farm products from a territory so rich in soil and opportunities as Northwestern Canada and opportunities as Northwestern Canada.

Reciprocity, said the speaker, was not needed to increase this country's trade with Canada; it is increasing as it is.

A plea for the farmer is made, and the speaker sounded a note of warning. He said to those senators who represent the great cities with their enormous wealth:

wealth:

"Every great conflict is not determined in favor of him who strikes the first blow." said Mr. McCumber, "but in favor of him who strikes the last. By this treaty you strike the great cereal and stock interests of the Northwestern states a staggering blow, but they will arise and return that blow with interest."

Retributive punishment, however. Mr. McCumber said, was no part of his faith. He did not believe in retaliation upon the farmers by the enactment of the McCall bill when theirs had been the "mild offense of having been misled by the press and magazines of the country."
