

BATH AND BED FOR FIFTEEN CENTS IN MODERN HOTEL

M. Miyagawa Solves High Cost of Living Problem and Adds "Must Do" Feature to Keep Guests Clean.

Fifteen cents for bed and bath. Twenty-five to 75 cents for room and bath. Pay your money and take your choice—but a bath, anyway. Such is the rule governing the cost of a night's lodging at the new Puget Sound Hotel, Sixth Avenue South and Dearborn Street, probably the most remarkable institution not its kind in the country.

The individual who takes this solar plexus wallop at Old High Cost of Living M. Miyagawa explains, "I am a member of the local Japanese colony, who declares he has old H. C. of out a bath with a high and blowing fan. Of course, the feature of the institution is the free yet compulsory shower bath. The bath is a plain five-story brick structure in so far as the outside is concerned, but the casual passerby will not see there are two entrances and two lobbies.

The Duesman Street entrance is to the "flop" house, but a flop house such as no itinerant ever saw elsewhere in the country. The guest first of all separates himself from three nickels and registers. He is then escorted into a locker room where he is required to disrobe.

Then comes the bath, which Proprietor Miyagawa explains, "I have a 'must do' feature of entertainment. Soap is furnished free and hot water is as plentiful as a bee at a swarming beehive. When the guest has completed his ablutions—and not until the attendant is entirely satisfied of their thoroughness—he is admitted to the sleeping quarters.

The hardened patron of the old-time "flop" house, with its grimy and poor ventilation and assortment of smells and sounds—and things, gasps with wonder when he is first ushered into the sleeping room. Shining soaps in his birthday suit, he finds himself standing in a little partitioned off space occupied by a three-quarters width iron bed.

In building this department of the hotel, Miyagawa solved the very puzzling problem of what to do with the store buildings occupying the ground floor. He could find no tenants so he framed the window panes and behind this curtain installed the equipment of his "flop" house.

Miyagawa, in leasing the new building and to figure on the revenue from his store rooms to pay the rent, as does nearly every other proprietor of such structures, and the best house, although less than two weeks old, is returning this revenue with interest. The hotel building was erected at a cost of $110,000 by A. V. Williams, well known Seattle contractor, who has erected fine hotels in the southern section of the city. He has leased the hotel on a ten-year basis.

The upper part of the hotel, or that section above the "flop house," contains 44 rooms, three of which are practically every convenience—not luxuries.

NOT SANTA'S FAULT, BUT IT SPOILS YULETIDE

More Than $800 Worth of Christmas Merchandise Certificates Can't Be Redeemed by Bankrupt.

It was no fault of Kris Kringle's, but Four hundred young women, young men, fond fathers and dear mothers have just discovered the painful fact that Christmas presents which they received two weeks ago, and which they do not present, after all.

The trouble is that Martin's, Inc., 1614 Second Avenue, from whom glove and merchandise certificates amounting to more than $800 were purchased as Christmas gifts, will not redeem the certificates. The reason therefor is that shortly after Christmas the store made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of its creditors to E. Fisher, formerly treasurer of the Stone-Fisher Company, as trustee, and Walter A. McClure, of McClure & McClure, as attorney.
