means of training the alien population in American citizenship.

While pointing out the impossibility of laying down any hard and fast rules on the subject, the letter declares that the prime requisite is ability to speak the English tongue. "It is through this medium alone," it says, "that aliens can acquire a practical knowledge, both in and out of the schools, of our institutions

"Above all, they ought to be taught that the supreme authority in this country is the law and that the first duty of an American citizen is obedience to that law, even though it may seem an unwise or objectionable law, the remedy in the latter case being through constitutional methods to modify or change the law; but that in all cases the first duty of American citizenship is obedience to the law as written."

Squad of Young Men From South Dakota Give Remarkable Exhibition - LaSalle Singers Popular.

A SPLENDID example of what higher institutions of learning are doing to help the federal government meet the problem of military preparedness is seen this week at The Empress in the performance of the North Dakota Agricultural College drill squad. This is a group of nine clean-cut athletic young men who entertain for twenty minutes with a remarkable exhibition of team drill work. Seemingly numberless formations and maneuvers, many of them exceedingly difficult, were executed without a hitch yesterday to the admiration of full houses.

Another popular number this week is the La Salle Opera Company, presenting excerpts from both grand and light opera. The company is composed of Lillian Steele, soprano; Dorothy Henke, contraito; Alfred A. Kangerg, tenor, and Harold B. Gould, basso.

The comedy of the bill is furnished by the Two Gregorys, man and maid, billied as "Those Ozark Folk." The young woman plays the rural comedience to perfection and her partner gives some clever whistling solos and mitations.

George T. Morey, musical ventriloquist, opens the bill. After the usual Punch and Judy performance, Morey offers some pleasing selections on stringed instruments. Juggling Wilbur offers some new ideas in juggling the act being Interspersed with comedy. Mendel and Nagel, two young men, prove popular with their performances, on the violin and accordion as street musicians.

LOIS HAS ANOTHER

LOIS HAS ANOTHER ENTERTAINING BILL

The Lois has an entertaining bill again this week, with Dancing Davey, in a terpsichorean revel, as the particular feature. Davey asks the audience for its favorite dances and then gives the ones called for. His imitations of Charlie Chaplin and George Primrose were tremendously popular.

The bill has a very good dramatic sketch this week in "The Boy and the Regiment," a gripping affair in which a father would cast off his son because the latter does not want to be a soldier. It is given a splendid portrayal by Laura. Winston, a former stock favorite here and a capable company. The Hawaiian Troubadours, five men and a pretty girl, offer a pleasing combination of island melodies and instrumental music and some good dancing. The Schofield Duo, two men, in a repertoire of late songs, proved popular. Mr. Whoishe, "the man of mystery," missed his train and did not arrive in time for the performances yesterday.

PORTLAND, Ore. Monday, Aug. 23.—Efforts by friends of Frank Lemonn, former sales manager of the United States Cashier Company, to obtain his release by raising, $5,000, the amount to which his bond was advanced Saturday following his conviction of fraudulent use of the mails, were unavailing today, and Lemonn remained in jail. The other men convicted, Frank Menefee, former president; Oscar Campbell, former vice-president, and C. E. Gerner, B. F. Boennevell and H. M. Todd, salesmen, were set at ilberty on motion of District Attorney Reames pending sentence on their original bonds of $2,500 each. Reames declined to agree to Lemonn's release on equal terms because, he declared, Lemonn had fled when a warrant was first issued for his arrest and was not found for six months thereafter. Attorneys for all the men convicted announced that they were perfecting plans to seek a new trial and failing that would appeal to the federal court of appeals.

Fifty Mountaineers, a number of them women, arrived in Seattle yesterday afternoon after making a complete circuit of Mount Rainier and enjoying a bonfire party on the peak. The hikers reached the top of the mountain August 14 remaining there twenty minutes. It was the first time so large a party has accomplished this feat.

The ascent of the mountain was made from Camp Curtis amid ideal weather conditions. The entire delegation, consisting of fifty-seven, of whom twenty-two were women, left the camp, which is directly above Giacler Basin, on the northwest side of the peak, at 4:30 a. m. # HOLDS MEETING

Crowd Attends Initial Session of New Labor Organization -Orientals Seek American Workers' Goal.

By C. D. STRATTON.

INAUGURATION of a movement of more than local importance and significance was celebrated in Seattle last night when the Japanese Labor Association, a trade union organization in many respects unique, held its first open meeting and placed before the public, particularly the Japanese colony, its aims and purposes and its plans for the future. Nearly a thousand Japanese of both sexes and of all ages attended the meeting, the first half of which was devoted to speechmaking and the last to an elaborate program of Japanese music and dancing, closing with an admirably played tabloid drama of Old Japan.

The meeting was held in Jananese last to an elaborate program of Japanese music and dancing, closing with an admirably played tabloid drama of Old Japan.

The meeting was held in Japanese Hall, 121 Maynard Avenue, and was presided over by C. T. Takahashi, a leading merchant and importer of the colony, who is president of the new association under the temporary organization just completed. At least a dozen members of the association were speakers and the new movement was discussed from many different viewpoints—journeymen craftsmen, employers of labor, tradesmen and capitalists all having their say regarding the young organization and frequently rousing the big audience to a high pitch of enthuslasm by their oratory. President Takahashi's speech, however, was interpreted as fairly representing the sentiment of the association. He declared that for several years the United States and Japan had been engaged in an interchange not only of articles of commerce, but of knowledge and ideas as well. Long ago the diplomats and high officials of the one country began visiting the other. Later students traveled from one land to the other and an inerchange of college professors for mutual benefit was arranged. Then merchants and capitalists enrolled in various commercial organizations interchanged visits.

Labor Not Drawn Together.

Labor Not Drawn Together.

But never yet had there been an interchange of ideas between the workers of the two nations, and here, the speaker believed, would be found the real source of whatever suspicion and misunderstanding the Japanese In America encounters.

It would be the mission of the new association, said Takahashi, to bring about closer relations and a better feeling between the workers of the two countries and to change the opinion of the Occidental that the Oriental is content with cheap wages and low standards of tving. In fact, he said, the Japanese is not a cheap worker and has not desire to be rated as such. Therefore the association would cooperate to the fullest extent with all said to the fullest extent with all seattle unions of the American labor movement and strive to bring about in wages, improve working conditions and elevate standards of living to place the Japanese worker on a par with the American wage earner.

Similar views regarding certain of the problems to be met were expressed by T. Sato, who spoke in English in deference to the Rev. Sydney Strong, pastor of the Queen Anne Congregational Church, who he presented as the next speaker.

Sought to Become American.

pastor of the Queen Anne Congregational Church, whom he presented as the next speaker.

Sato declared that Seattle Japanese, as a rule, had come to America to become Americans and were imbued with the same love of liberty and republican institutions as immigrants from any other land. He paid an eloquent tribute to George Washington and touched effectively upon the recent trip to the West of the Liberty Bell. The new association, he believed, by removing causes of misunderstanding between the wage workers of America and Japan, would greatly strengthen the friendly relations now existing between the two countries.

Dr. Strong made a good trade union speech, dwelling upon the benefits of organization to the wage earner. He declaimed any credit for the organization of the new association, but commended its purposes heartily. He had not found the Japanese a cheap man in any respect, he said, and complaints to that effect were justly to be made only against the newcomer, still unfamiliar with American standards. By educating these new arrivals and by maintaining and raising still higher the standard of living for the Japanese worker, the association could and would do much to bring about close and friendly relations between the wage earners of the two nationalities. Organization of labor, he asserted, would benefit not only the worker but the employer and he gave his approval to the liberality of the new association in giving the employer a voice in its proceedings. In closing he promised the association his aid and cooperation at all times.

Japanese Club Entertains.

Following the speechmaking and en-ployer a voice in its proceedings. In closing he promised the association his aid and cooperation at all times.

Japanese Club Entertains.

Following the speechmaking and entertainment program the members of the association were the guests of its officers at supper erved in the rooms of the Japanese Commercial Club in the same building The association now has 120 members but is expected to grow to several thousand.

It is the intention of the promoters of the Japanese Labor Association to make it eventually the city central body of all Japanese labor organizations that may hereafter be formed. The association in its present form more resembles one of the trade guilds of the Middle Ages than a modern labor union, since masters as well as journeymen are in the organization and tradesmen, alapered, already income the American standard. Already in the American standard, already in the American standard, already in the American standard. Already cluston is under consideration. Notably large in proportion to the Japanese population is the number of cilinary craft workers, tailors, shoemakers and clerks who could be organized. The Japanese barbers already have a strong local union and in fact are the ploneers of the Japanese labor movement in Seattle. It is their strong desire to become affiliated with the Appress to become affiliated with the Journeymen Barbers' international Federation of Labor, but the constitution of the international now stands in the way.

and receive the full union scale of wages.

The temporary officers of the labor association are C. T. Takahashi, president; J. T. Kikutake and C. Ito. vice-presidents: K. Sasaki, secretary; C. Fulli, treasurer.

The association has adopted a union button of white enamel with the letters J. L. A. in monogram of gold, surrounded by a blue band with white stars.

The hall where the meeting was held last night was profusely decorated with American and Japanese fiags intertwined and red, white and blue bunting draped the walls. The members of the association wore a red, white and blue ribbon badge.
